SYSTEM OF TRANSLITERATION ADOPTED.

A.—For the Dēva-nāgarī alphabet, and others related to it—

अ a, आ ā, इ i, ई ī, उ u, ऊ ū, ए ṛi, प्र e, ए ē, ऐ ai, ओ o, औ ō, औ au.

क ka ख kha ग ga घ gha ङ ṅa च cha छ chha ज ja झ jha ञ ña
 ट ṭa ठ ṭha ड ḍa ढ ḍha ण ṇa त ta थ thā द da ध dha न na
 प pa फ pha ब ba भ bha म ma य ya र ra ल la व va or wa
 श śa ष ṣha स sa ह ha ङ ṅa ढ ḍha ञ ña ण ṇa.

Visarga (:) is represented by ḥ, thus क्रमः kramaḥ. Anuswāra (̣) is represented by m, thus सिंह siṃh, वंश vaṃś. In Bengali and some other languages it is pronounced ng, and is then written ng; thus बंश baṅśa. Anundāsika or Chandra-bindu is represented by the sign ~ over the letter nasalized, thus में mē̃.

B.—For the Arabic alphabet, as adapted to Hindōstānī—

ا	a , etc.	ح	j	د	d	ر	r	س	s	ع	ʿ
ب	b	ڄ	ch	ڌ	ḍ	ڙ	ṛ	ش	sh	غ	gh

										ل	l
										م	m
										ن	n
										و	w or v
										ه	h

Tanwin is represented by n, thus فِیْران fauran. Alif-i maqṣūra is represented by ā;— thus, دَاعِی da'wā.

In the Arabic character, a final silent h is not transliterated,—thus بَند banda. When pronounced, it is written,—thus, گُنَہ gunāh.

Vowels when not pronounced at the end of a word, are not written in transliteration. Thus, بان ban, not banā. When not pronounced in the middle of a word or only slightly pronounced in the middle or at the end of a word, they are written in small characters above the line. Thus (Hindī) देखता dēkh'tā, pronounced dēkhtā; (Kāś-mīrī) चह ts'h; कर् kar, pronounced kor; (Bihārī) देखिय dēkhath'.

C.—Special letters peculiar to special languages will be dealt with under the head of the languages concerned. In the meantime the following more important instances may be noted :—

- (a) The ts sound found in Marāṭhī (च), Puṣhtō (چ), Kāśmīrī (چ, च), Tibetan (ཅ), and elsewhere, is represented by ts. So, the aspirate of that sound is represented by tsʰ.
- (b) The dz sound found in Marāṭhī (ज), Puṣhtō (ج), and Tibetan (ཇ) is represented by dz, and its aspirate by dzʰ.
- (c) Kāśmīrī چ (چ) is represented by ñ.
- (d) Sindhī چ, Western Panjābī (and elsewhere on the N.-W. Frontier) چ, and Puṣhtō چ or چ are represented by ŋ.
- (e) The following are letters peculiar to Puṣhtō :—
 چ t; چ ts or dz, according to pronunciation; چ d; چ r; چ zh or g, according to pronunciation; چ sh or kh, according to pronunciation; چ or چ n.
- (f) The following are letters peculiar to Sindhī :—
 پ bb; پ bh; ت th; ت t; ت th; پ ph; چ jj; چ jh; چ ohh;
 چ ñ; چ dh; چ d; چ dd; چ dh; چ k; ک kh; گ gg; گ gh;
 چ n; چ n.

D.—Certain sounds, which are not provided for above, occur in transcribing languages which have no alphabet, or in writing phonetically (as distinct from transliterating) languages (such as Bengali) whose spelling does not represent the spoken sounds. The principal of these are the following :—

ā, represents the sound of the a in all.

ā, " " " a in hat.

ō, " " " o in hot.

e, " " " é in the French était.

o, " " " o in the first o in promote.

ö, " " " ö in the German schön.

th, " " " th in think.

dh, " " " th in this.

The semi-consonants peculiar to the Muṇḍā languages are indicated by an apostrophe. Thus k', t', p', and so on.

E.—When it is necessary to mark an accented syllable, the acute accent is used. Thus in (Khōwār) ássistai, he was, the acute accent shows that the accent falls on the first, and not, as might be expected, on the second syllable.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

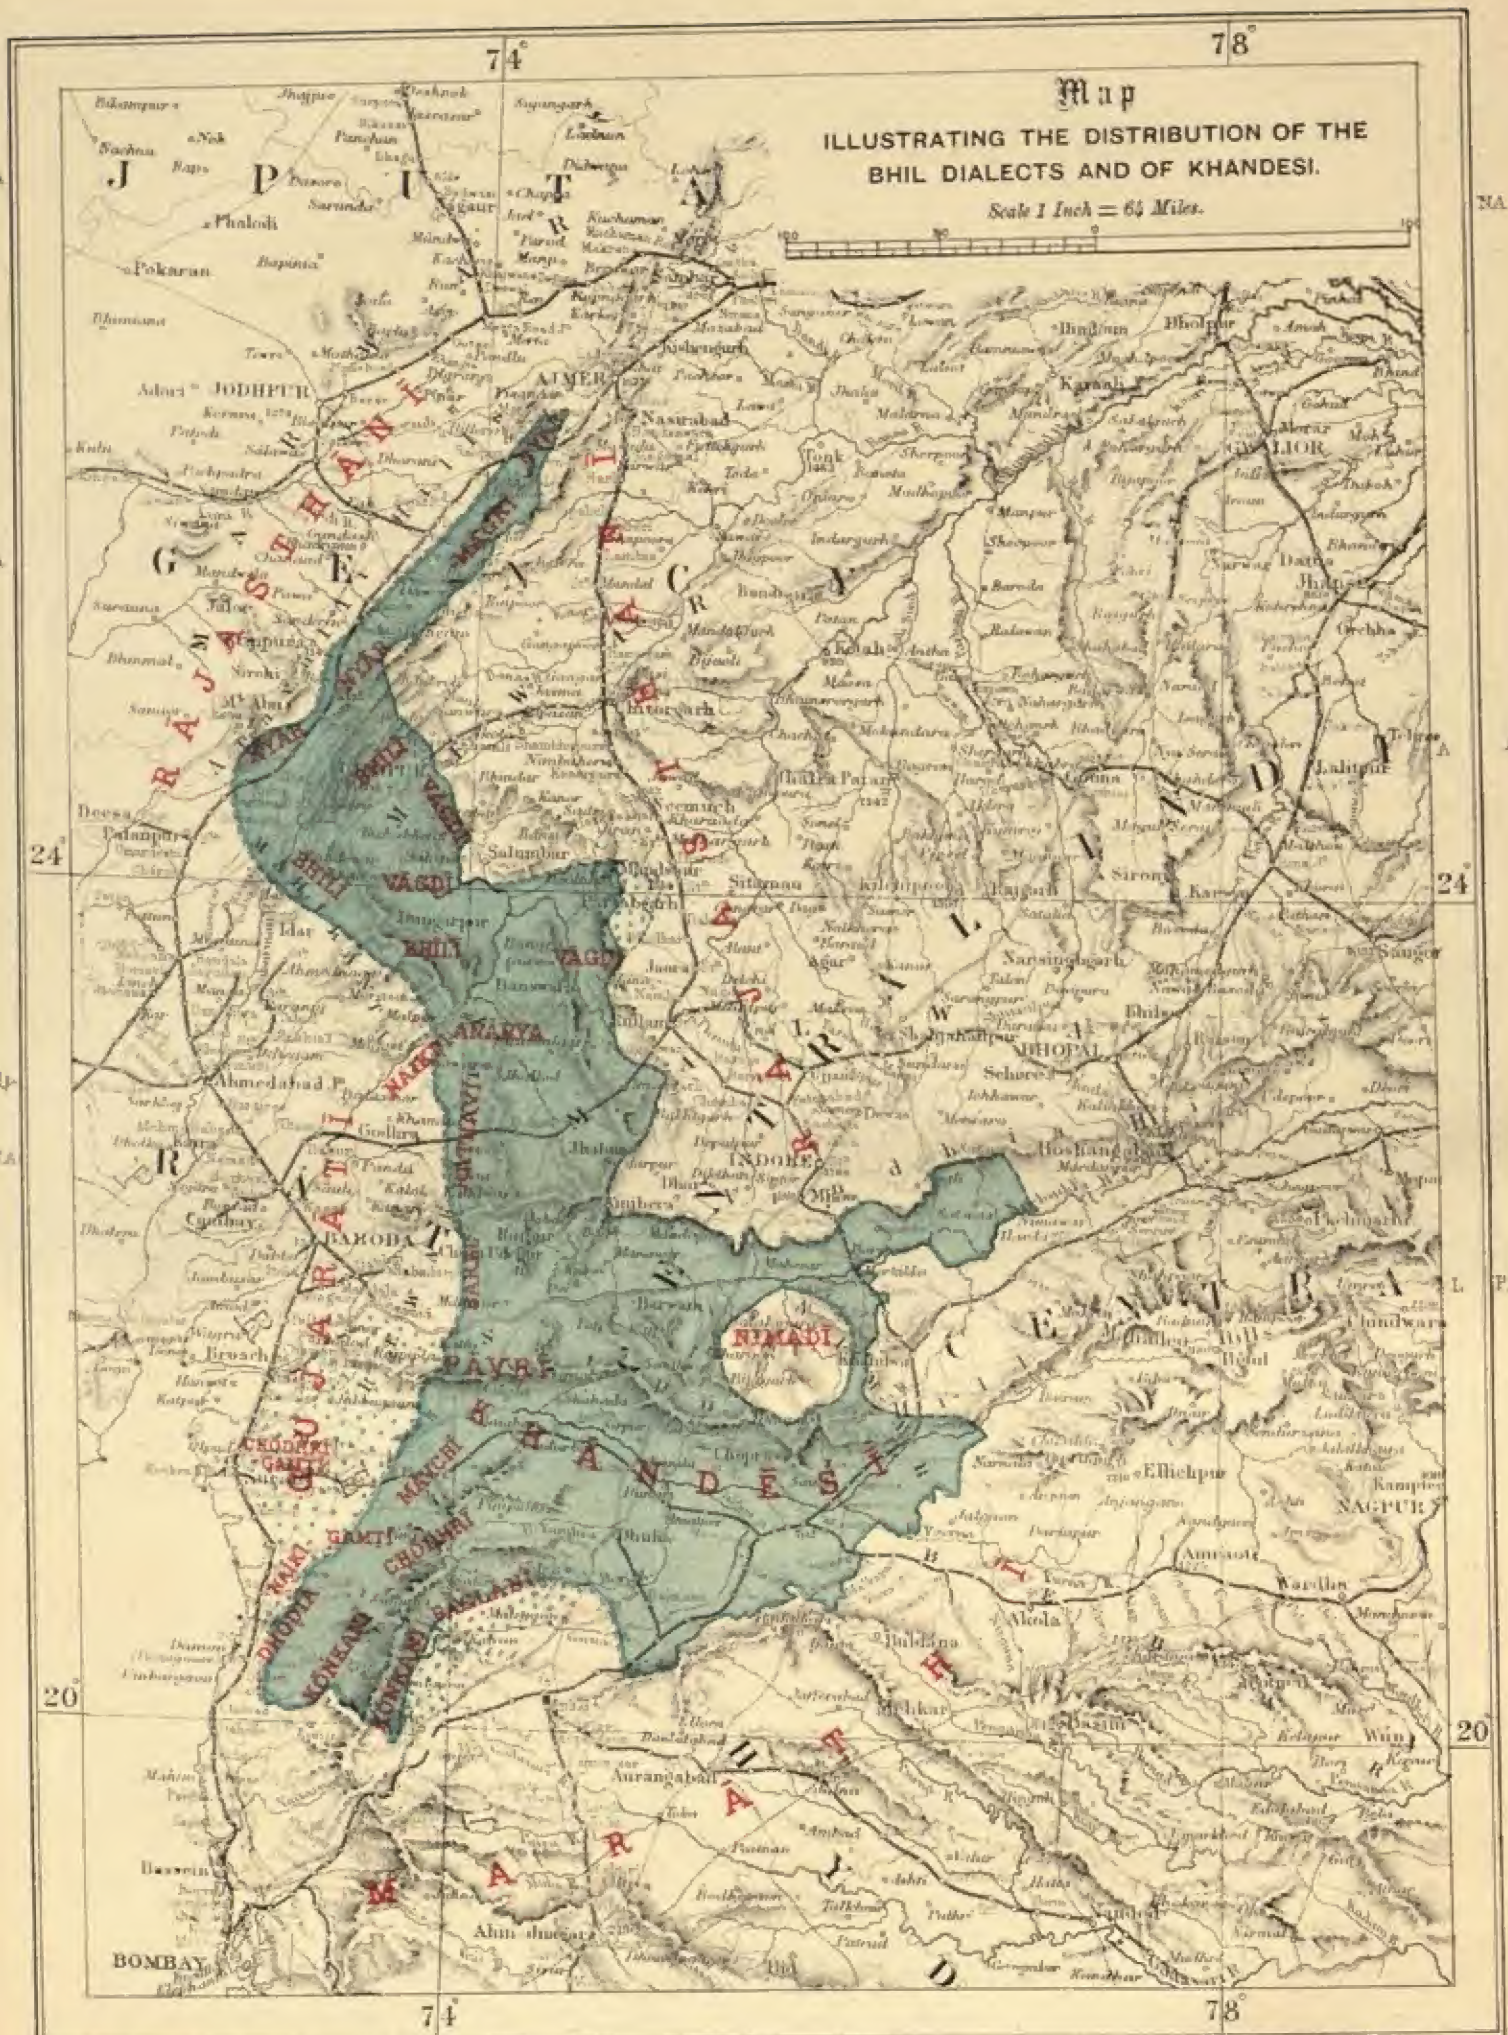

PART III of Volume IX of the Linguistic Survey is in reality a supplement to Part II which deals with Rājasthānī and Gujarātī. It is devoted to the numerous Bhīl languages of Central and Western India and to the Khāndēśī spoken in the district of Khandesh. Certain of the so-called 'Gipsy Languages,' viz., Bāorī, Habūrā, Pār'dhī, and Siyālgirī, have been discovered to be varieties of Bhīlī and have been classed with that language. These are spoken by wandering tribes in widely separated parts of India, some of the specimens coming from Lahore in the Punjab, while another comes from Midnapore in Bengal.

The volume concludes with an account of the dialect of the wandering carriers known as Banjārās or Labhānās. This is evidently a corrupt form of the Rājasthānī spoken in the North-West of Rajputana.

The sections dealing with Bhīlī and with Khāndēśī have been in the first instance prepared by my Assistant Dr. Sten Konow, of Christiania, Norway; I have edited them throughout, and have added a few remarks here and there. As General Editor of the series of volumes of the Linguistic Survey of India, I am responsible for all statements contained in these sections. The remainder of this part has been prepared by myself.

I take this opportunity of recording my obligations to Mr. A. H. A. Simecox of the Indian Civil Service for a valuable series of excellent and carefully prepared specimens illustrating several of the Bombay Bhīl dialects.

GEORGE A. GRIERSON.

BHİL DIALECTS AND KHĀNDEŚĪ.

The border country between Rajputana, Central India, the Central Provinces, and the Bombay Presidency is inhabited by many tribes known under various names, such as Bhils, Ahirs, and so forth.

Their home may be described as an irregularly shaped triangle, with the apex in the Aravalli Hills, and the base roughly corresponding to the south-eastern frontier of the district of Khandesh. The frontier line goes south-westwards from the Aravalli Range, including the south-eastern corner of Sirohi, and, farther to the south, including Mahikantha and the eastern portion of Rewakantha. The population of the Surat District and the Surat Agency, and of the Nawsari division of the Baroda State, is mostly Bhil, and we also find them in Thana and Jawhar, and even further south, in Ahmednagar. From the south of Dharampur, in the Surat Agency, the frontier of the Bhil-Ahīr country proper turns first eastward and then northward including the north-western strip of the district of Nasik. It then crosses Nasik, leaving the greater—southern—part of that district to Marāṭhī, follows the south-eastern frontier of Khandesh, includes a strip of the Melkapur Taluka of Buldana and the Burhanpur Tahsil of Nimar. Thence it turns northwards to the Nerbudda. In Bhopawar, however, Nimārī is spoken in a large, circular, area to the west of the Nimar district. The frontier line then follows the Nerbudda towards the east, and then goes northwards to the Vindhya, where it turns westwards up to near the town of Indore, whence it runs in an irregular bow up to the Aravalli Hills, including the western portion of Jhabua and Ratlam, Banswara and the west of Partabgarh, Dungarpur and the hilly tracts of the Mewar State.

Outside of this territory we find Bhil tribes in various districts of Berar, and similar dialects are spoken by wandering tribes in the Punjab, the United Provinces, and even in the Midnapore district of Bengal. Ahirs are found all over Northern India, but it is only in Cutch that their dialect resembles that spoken by the various Bhil tribes and by the inhabitants of Khandesh.

The number of speakers of the various dialects will be given in detail in the following pages. We shall here only state the general results. They are as follows:—

Bhil dialects	2,689,109
Khāndēśī (and its sub-dialects)	1,253,066
TOTAL	3,942,175

The dialects in question are mostly bounded towards the north and east by the various dialects of Rājasthānī, towards the south by Marāṭhī, and towards the west by Marāṭhī and Gujarātī.

Among the dialects spoken within the territory sketched above there is one, viz., Khāndēśī, which has hitherto been classed as a form of Marāṭhī. The ensuing pages will, however, show, on the one side, that the so-called Bhil dialects gradually merge into the language of Khandesh, on the other that Khāndēśī itself is not a Marāṭhī dialect. Several suffixes, it is true, are identical with those used in Marāṭhī. But most suffixes and the inner form of the language more closely agree with Gujarātī and Rājasthānī.

The northern and eastern dialects connect Gujarātī with Rājasthānī, while, in the west, there runs a continuous line of dialects southwards towards the broken Marāṭhī dialects of Thana. The influence of Marāṭhī increases as we go southwards, and these forms of speech are thus a link between that language and Gujarātī. This latter language is, however, everywhere the original base, and the gradual approaching the principles of Marāṭhī in structure and inflexional system seems to be due to a secondary development. It should, however, be remembered that the inner Indo-Aryan languages and those of the outer circle have, at an early date, met and influenced each other in Gujarat and the adjoining districts.

The relation existing between the dialects in question and other Indo-Aryan vernaculars will be defined in greater detail in the ensuing pages. In this place we must confine ourselves to some general remarks.

The short a has, in many dialects, the broad sound of o in 'hot.' Thus, pōg and pag, foot. The same is the case in Rājasthānī dialects and in Kōṅkaṇī, but usually not in those dialects where the Marāṭhī influence is strongest. Ē takes the place of a in Sirohi, and also, to some extent, in Jhabua.

The palatals commonly become s-sounds, especially in the north. The same is the case in Gujarātī and Rājasthānī dialects, and we may also compare the pronunciation of ch and j as ts and dz, respectively, in Marāṭhī and in the Charōtārī dialects of Gujarātī.

S very commonly developes to a sound which is described as something between h and s. The real sound seems to be that of ch in 'loch.' This pronunciation is quite common everywhere in the eastern part of Gujarāt. As we go westwards and eastwards, this sound becomes an ordinary h as in some dialects of Gujarātī and Mālvi. In the south, on the other hand, an s usually remains. The letter h itself is very commonly dropped, as is also the case in Gujarātī and Rājasthānī dialects.

There is a strong tendency to substitute hard for soft mutes. This is especially the case with soft aspirates, and forms such as kōḍō or khōḍō, instead of ghōḍō, a horse, are quite common. There are also many instances of the hardening of unaspirated soft letters. Thus litō and lidō, taken; fāhī and dāhī, a cow, and so on. The palatal j seems to be especially apt to be hardened, and is very often pronounced as an s. The emphatic particle ch in Khāndēśī is perhaps due to this tendency and is not identical with the Marāṭhī ts.

In many dialects a medial r is frequently elided, as in kōi, for kari, having done; mōũ, for marũ, I may die; dūu, for dūr, far; all of which are quoted from the Mawchi of Khandesh.¹

These last two peculiarities,—the hardening of soft mutes, and the elision of medial r,—also occur in the languages of North-Western India (Sindhī, Lahndā, and Piśācha), as well as in some dialects of Bengali (notably Rājbangśī), all of which belong to the Outer Band of Indo-Aryan Languages.

¹ See also pp. 69, 84, 105, 110, 119, and 153.

The inflexion of nouns is mainly the same as in Gujarātī. In the south we find some instances of the use of the Marāṭhī oblique form, not, however, as a regular feature. Khāndēśī has developed a separate oblique form of the plural ending in ēs or s. In Ahīrī we find a similar form ending in ē. An s is very often added to the base in many dialects; thus, bā and bās, a father. Similar forms are common in the Marāṭhī dialect of the Central and Northern Konkan.

Strong masculine bases form their plural in ā as in Gujarātī. In the dialects spoken in the southern part of Rewakantha, in Khāndēśī, and in the Bhil dialects spoken between that district and the sea, however, we also find the Marāṭhī form ending in ē.

The case suffixes are the same as in Gujarātī. As in some Gujarātī dialects, the ablative suffix is usually inflected in the same way as the genitive suffix. In addition to the form thō, etc., it also occurs as hō, etc., compare Rājasthānī. The n of the suffix nē of the dative is often replaced by l especially in the south and west. It then also sometimes assumes the Marāṭhī form lā.

The suffixes of the genitive and the dative are usually nō and nē, respectively. There is also another pair of suffixes hō and hē, respectively. These suffixes are apparently confined to the west, from Sunth and southwards. We meet them again in the broken Marāṭhī dialects of the Northern Konkan.

The personal pronoun of the first person usually forms its nominative singular as in Gujarātī; thus, hū, I, with several slightly varying forms. We also find forms such as mū in the dialects which lead over to Mālvī, and in the south and west the Marāṭhī form mī gradually gains ascendancy.

The present tense of the verb substantive is chhū, etc., in Gujarātī and Eastern Rājasthānī, and hū, etc., in Western Rājasthānī. The future tense is usually formed by adding an s-suffix in those dialects where 'I am' is chhū, and an h-suffix where the corresponding form is hū. Periphrastic future forms are used besides, an inflected lō being added in the east, and an indeclinable lā in the west. We also find a gō-suffix in Mālvī and some dialects of Mārwarī.

All these forms occur in the various Bhil dialects. The h-form of the present tense of the verb substantive prevails in the dialects spoken in the Aravalli Hills, and neighbourhood, such as Mag'ri and Nyār; in the hilly tracts of the Mewar State, in Partabgarh, Ratlam, and Dhar. It is further the common form in the Bhil dialects of Mahikantha, the Sunth State of Rewakantha; the Nōrī dialects of Ali Rajpur; the Māwchī dialect of Khandesh, and the various forms of Bhilī spoken in the Nausari Division of the Baroda State and neighbourhood, such as Rāṇī, Chōdhri, Gāmṭī, Naik'dī. The Marāṭhī forms of the verb substantive begin to be used in the south, and are prevalent in most forms of Kōnkanī.

The future is formed by adding an h-suffix in most of these dialects. In the north, however, in Merwara, we find the Jaipurī future ending in lō, and in Ratlam, Partabgarh and Dhar we have the gō-future of Mālvī.

The chh-form of the verb substantive often replaces the initial chh with s. The s-form prevails in the Bhil dialects of the Panch Mahals, Jhabua, Chhota Udaipur, and Rajpipla, and the chh-form in the Lunawada and Baria States of Rewakantha; in Ali Rajpur, Barwani, and over the greater portion of Khandesh.

The future is formed by adding an h-suffix in the Panch Mahals, Jhabua, Chhota Udaipur, and Rajpipla. An s-suffix is adopted in Lunawada, Bharia, Khandesh, Ali Rajpur, and Bharwani, in the latter district the gō-suffix of Nimāri and Mālvi being used as well.

The present tense of finite verbs is commonly formed as in Gujarātī and Rājasthānī by adding the verb substantive to the old present. In the west and south there is, however, a tendency to substitute the present participle for the old present, first apparently in the plural, and then, afterwards, in the whole tense. Khāndēśī has remained in the intermediate stage, and has regularly forms such as paḍas, he falls; paḍ^{tas}, they fall. Further details will be found later on.

The past tense is usually formed as in Gujarātī. As in that language and in Eastern Hindī, a suffix nō or ṇō is used as well as the ordinary yō-suffix. Lō is often substituted for nō, just as l and n interchange in the suffix of the dative.

The nō-suffix is occasionally also used in the present tense. It is not certain whether it is identical with the l-suffix in Marāṭhī or not. It is also possible to think of a connexion of the n-suffix which forms relative participles in Telugu and other Dravidian languages. If nō is identical with Marāṭhī lā, its wide use in Bhilī must be accounted for by the use of the old l-suffix (Prakrit illa) at a period when it was still a pleonastic suffix without being limited to the past tense.

The future, the verbal noun, and the conjunctive participle, are formed as in Gujarātī. As we approach the Marāṭhī territory, however, the forms of that language begin to appear and gradually gain ascendancy.

The preceding remarks will have shown that the position assigned to the dialects in question is correct, and that they are in reality more closely related to Gujarātī and Rājasthānī than to any other Indo-Aryan vernacular. The same result may be derived from a comparison of the vocabulary. We are not, however, able to make any statement in this respect regarding Khāndēśī. As to the Bhil dialects, the Rev. Ch. Thompson has calculated that about 84 per cent. of the words found in the Bhil dialect of Mahikantha may be derived from Sanskrit and correspond to words used in Gujarātī. About 10 per cent. are of Persian descent, and the remaining six cannot as yet be traced.

We shall now proceed to consider the various dialects in detail, and first turn to the so-called Bhil dialects.

BHİLĪ OR BHILOḌĪ.

The Bhils are known under a bewildering variety of names. On account of their dark colour they are often called Kālī paraj, the black people. The only comprehensive name is, however, Bhīl, the Sanskrit Bhilla.¹ Ethnographically they are sometimes stated to be Dravidians, and sometimes to belong to the Muṇḍā stock. Accounts of the various tribes are found in the Census Reports and the District Gazetteers. In this place we have only to do with their language. Whatever their original speech may have been, there can be no doubt that, at the present day, they speak an Aryan dialect, closely related to Gujarātī and Rājasthānī.

Number of speakers.

By adding these figures to those given above we arrive at the following grand total :—

Bhili	1,163,872
Minor Dialects	1,525,237
TOTAL .	2,689,109

The territory occupied by the Bhil tribes is a rather extensive one, and there are, as might be expected, differences of dialect in the different parts of the Bhil country. Towards the north and east the dialects of the Bhils gradually merge into the various forms of Rājasthānī. In the west and south the influence of Marāṭhī gradually increases. Thus the southern forms of Kōṅkaṇi are almost Marāṭhī and gradually merge into some broken dialects of the Northern Konkan, such as Vār^{li}, Phud^{gi}, Sām^{vēdi}, and Vād^{val}, which have now become real Marāṭhī dialects, though their original base must have agreed with Bhilī. More towards the east the Bhil dialects gradually approach Khāndēśī, and at the Khandesh frontier, in Northern Nasik and in the Dangs, they are almost pure Khāndēśī.

The Bhil dialects, therefore, form a continuous chain, between Rājasthānī, through Gujarātī and Khāndēśī, and Marāṭhī. In most cases, however, the Marāṭhī influence is only of a quite superficial kind, and the general character of the dialect remains Gujarātī. In Nīmār, the Bhilī seems to have been more strongly influenced by Marāṭhī than elsewhere, the specimens forwarded from that district being written in a corrupt Marāṭhī, see below, p. 174. From Berar only one set of specimens has been received. It had been prepared in Basim and was written in a form of Gōṇḍī. The specimen will be dealt with in connexion with that latter form of speech. The reported number of speakers from Berar has, however, been added in the figures given above. It seems probable that the Gōṇḍī-speaking Bhils simply employ the language of their neighbours.

Specimens will be given in the following pages of the various Bhil dialects. They will be arranged according to principles which it will be necessary to point out in this place.

The best known among all Bhil dialects is that of Mahikantha. It is the main basis of the Rev. Ch. Thompson's Bhil grammar. Mahikantha is also a convenient starting point if we desire to follow the various ramifications of the Bhil dialects, and the form of Bhilī spoken there has accordingly been dealt with as Standard Bhilī.

It is closely related to Gujarātī. The present tense of the verb substantive, however, does not begin with chh, but with an h-sound which seems to correspond to the ch in 'loch.' The same sound is also the characteristic of the future tense.

To the north-east of Mahikantha lie the hilly tracts of the Mewar State where Bhilī is the principal language. The dialect is almost the same as in Mahikantha. There are, however, traces of the influence of the neighbouring Mār^{wāri}. Thus the periphrastic future ending in -gō begins to occur in Kotra.

The influence of Mār^{wāri} increases as we proceed northwards along the Aravalli hills, where we find the so-called Girāsīā or Nyār. Still farther to the north, in the southern portion of the Merwara State, we find the dialect Mag^{ri} which is almost pure Mār^{wāri}.

If we return to Mahikantha we can trace another series of dialects forming a link with Mālvi. They are spoken to the east of Mahikantha, in Dungarpur, Banswara, Partabgarh, Ratlam, and Dhar. The present tense of the verb substantive begins with an h, and the future is usually formed periphrastically by adding -gō. In Ratlam we also find the chh form of the present tense of the verb substantive which is common in the dialects to the west of the State.

We again return to Mahikantha. The Bhilī of the Sunth State of Rewakantha is almost identical with the dialect spoken in Mahikantha. Proceeding towards the east we find, in the eastern portion of the Panch Mahals, a dialect of Bhilī which may be considered as the central link in a chain connecting Nīmārī in the east with Standard Gujarātī in the west. The present tense of the verb substantive begins with s while the characteristic element of the future is an h. The same is the case with the dialects spoken in Jhabua, and with the Bhil dialects of Chhota Udaipur and Rajpipla of the Rewakantha Agency. The Bhilī of the two last-mentioned districts, however, has so many points of analogy with the dialects spoken farther south and gradually approaching Marāṭhī that they will be dealt with in connexion with them.

The Bhil dialects of Ali Rajpur and Barwani, on the other hand, will be dealt with in connexion with those spoken in the Panch Mahals and Jhabua. The present tense of the verb substantive here begins with chh and the future is formed by adding an s-suffix. In Barwani the Bhil dialects gradually merge into Nimārī, and we occasionally also find the periphrastic future formed by adding a gā. From Ali Rajpur we shall proceed westwards through a series of dialects which gradually merge into Standard Gujarātī. The present tense of the verb substantive begins with chh and the future is formed by adding an s. These dialects are spoken in Baria, the western portion of the Panch Mahals, and in Lunawara. The dialect spoken in the Halol taluka of the Panch Mahals and in Lunawara is called Naik*ḍī. This dialect is also spoken in Surat where it has come under the influence of Marāṭhī. All the various forms of Naik*ḍī will therefore be dealt with later on.

The dialect of the Ahirs in Cutch, on the other hand, is closely related to Gujarātī, and will be dealt with in this connexion. It, however, also agrees with Marāṭhī in several points, and we shall therefore proceed from Ahirī to a series of dialects which runs down from Rewakantha and gradually approaches Marāṭhī and Khāndēśī.

We shall begin these with the dialects spoken in Chhota Udaipur and Rajpipla of the Rewakantha Agency. They agree with the Bhilī of the eastern Panch Mahals in the formation of the present tense of the verb substantive and of the future. The former begins with chh and the suffix of the future is h or ī.

In those dialects we meet with a new feature.

The usual present tense in Gujarātī and Rājasthānī is formed by adding the verb substantive to the conjunctive present. Thus, Gujarātī hũ karũ chhũ, I do. In Marāṭhī the same tense is formed from the present participle. Thus, mī karitō, I do. The forms used in Khāndēśī agree with Gujarātī in the singular and with Marāṭhī in the plural. Thus, karas, he does; *kar*tas*, they do.

The northern Bhil dialects mainly agree with Gujarātī and Rājasthānī. In Chhota Udaipur, on the other hand, the Khāndēśī and Marāṭhī forms begin to appear. Thus, chhũ, I am; chhē and chhatāh, they are. Compare also forms such as *jāt*lu chhē*, thou goest.

Pāw*ri, a dialect spoken in the north of Khandesh, will be dealt with between the Bhilī of Chhota Udaipur and that spoken in Rajpipla. It is closely related to the Barēl dialect of Chhota Udaipur, and leads, on the other hand, over to Khāndēśī.

In Rajpipla we begin to find the Marāṭhī present of the verb substantive, āhē. That form is more closely related to hē than to chhē. Hē, I is, and the h-suffix of the future tense prevail in the southern dialects of Naik*ḍī, and the various forms of that speech will therefore be dealt with after the Bhilī of Rajpipla.

The h-form of the present tense and the corresponding h-future also prevail in Māw*chī, spoken in the eastern part of Khandesh, and in the Nōrī dialect of Ali Rajpur.

The same is the case with the various Bhil dialects spoken in the Nawsari Division of the Baroda State and neighbouring districts, such as Rāpī, Chōdhrī, Gāmpī, and Dhōḍiā. Rāpī may be considered as the link connecting the southern forms of Bhilī with Pāw*ri and the dialects of Chhota Udaipur and Rajpipla. It shares the ablative suffix dēkh with Pāw'ri. Both dialects begin to use the Marāṭhī form of the plural of strong masculine bases, as is also the case in Rajpipla and Khandesh. The possessive pronouns are mā, my; tā, thy, as in Rajpipla, Māw'chī, and other connected dialects. The plural, and sometimes also the singular, of the present tense is formed from the present participle, and so forth.

The other Bhil dialects of Nawsari have still more traces of the influence of Marāṭhī, and the various forms of the so-called Kōnkaṇī gradually merge into the broken Marāṭhī dialects of Thana.

In Nasik, Kōnkaṇī merges into several Bhil dialects which are almost identical with Khāndēśī.

Before proceeding to deal with that form of speech we shall have to consider some dialects which have been more or less influenced from various sources.

In the first place the Bhilī of Nimar. That dialect has been largely influenced by the Marāṭhī of the Central Provinces, though it preserves sufficient traces of its different origin.

Then we shall have to deal with Bhil dialects spoken by some vagrant tribes, viz., Bāori, Habūrā, Pār'dhī, and Siyālgiri.

It should be borne in mind that the Bhils are not of Aryan origin, and that they have, accordingly, adopted a foreign tongue. We cannot under such circumstances expect the same consistency as in the case of the genuine Aryan vernaculars, and as a matter of fact we often meet with a state of affairs that reminds us of the mixed character of the language of other aboriginal tribes, which have, in the course of time, adopted the speech of their Aryan neighbours.

The Bhils have sometimes been considered as originally a Dravidian race, and sometimes as belonging to the Muṇḍā stock. We are not as yet in a position to settle the question.

The various Bhil dialects contain several words which do not appear to be of Aryan origin. Some of them seem to be Muṇḍā; thus, lāhī, a cow; bōdō, back. Compare Muṇḍārī tāhī, to milk a cow; Khariā bōd, back.

In other cases there is apparently a certain connexion between Bhilī and Dravidian. Compare talpā, head; lōlī, a cow; ākh'lō, a bull; with Tamil talei, head; Gōṇḍī lāli, a cow; Kanarese ākālu, a cow, and so forth.

It would not, however, be safe to base any conclusion on such stray instances of correspondence. We have not, as yet, sufficient insight into the relationship between the vocabularies of the Dravidian and Muṇḍā families. There can be no doubt that both have several words in common, especially in those districts where the two families meet. We are not, however, justified in concluding from such facts that these forms of speech are derived from the same base. It seems much more probable that they are both to some extent mixed languages, representing the dialects of the different races which have, in the course of time, invaded India. Each new race to some extent absorbed the old inhabitants, whose language left its mark in the grammar and vocabulary of the new invaders.

We must, therefore, leave the question about the origin of the non-Aryan element in Bhili vocabulary open until further investigations have thrown more light upon the relationship of the different linguistic families of India.

There are, on the other hand, a few points in Bhili grammar which apparently show some connexion with Dravidian forms of speech. They are not, however, numerous and quite insufficient to prove a closer connexion. The principal ones are as follows.

Soft aspirated letters are commonly hardened. Thus, khōvō, a horse; phāi, a brother. A similar hardening of unaspirated soft letters occurs in some Bhil dialects. See below. This state of affairs can perhaps be compared with the hardening of initial soft consonants in Dravidian. Compare, for example, Telugu kāramu, Sanskrit gharma, heat.

The neuter gender is sometimes used to denote female beings, just as is the case in Telugu, Gōṇḍī, etc. Thus, bairū, a wife; bairā, wives. The same is also the case in the Marāṭhī dialects of the coast where Dravidian influence is probable.

In this connexion we may also note the fact that the pronoun hā, this, has the same form for the feminine and neuter singular, just as is the case with the demonstrative pronouns in Telugu. The pronoun du, this, can further be compared with Tamil a-du, that, i-du, this, and similar forms in other Dravidian languages.

Finally, we may note the suffix n of the past tense. It is, of course, quite possible that this suffix is identical with the Aryan l in Marāṭhī and other languages. On the other hand, it can also be compared with the Dravidian suffix n. Compare Tamil ōḍu-nēn, I ran. The Dravidian n-suffix has, in other dialects, a very wide use, and this fact can perhaps be adduced in order to explain the occurrence of the n-suffix in Bhili in other tenses than the past. The Aryan l-suffix is, however, also used outside the past tense and was originally a common derivative suffix.

It would not be safe to urge such points. They are not of sufficient importance to furnish a conclusive proof. We should, however, remember that the Bhils belong to Western India where we might reasonably expect to find remnants of the old Dravidian population, and such strong grammatical characteristics as have just been mentioned make the supposition the more plausible that the Bhils have once spoken a Dravidian dialect. It is even possible that their original language was a Muṇḍā form of speech, which was in its turn superseded by a Dravidian tongue.

BHILĪ OF MAHIKANTHA.

It has already been stated that the Bhil dialect spoken in Mahikantha may be conveniently chosen as a starting point from which we can follow the ramifications of these forms of speech in all directions. It will therefore be necessary to give a somewhat fuller account of that dialect.

The remarks which follow are based on the specimens received from the Edar State and on the following

AUTHORITY—

THOMPSON, REV. CHAS. S.,—Rudiments of the Bhilī Language. Ahmedabad. United Printing Press, 1895.

Mr. Thompson's Bhilī is in all essential points the dialect of Mahikantha.

Pronunciation.—The letter a is often pronounced as an ō, or, more probably, as the a in English 'all.' It has been transliterated as ō, and I have not ventured to alter the spelling. Thus, pag and pōg, foot; pan and pōn, but. In the same way we find ō for ā in pōnī (Gujarātī pōnī) and pānī, water. In some Gujarātī dialects this ō, transliterated o and pronounced as in 'all,' is regularly substituted for ā. A nasalized ā̃ is very commonly written ō̃, and seems to be pronounced like on in French 'bon.' Thus, tamā̃ and tamō̃, you; āk̄h and ōk̄h, eye.

Final i in the singular of feminine nouns is commonly pronounced almost as an ē; thus, sōrī or sōrē, daughter; vī and vē, she. So also in dialectic Gujarātī.

A long final vowel is very often nasalized. Thus the suffix of the dative is ē̃ or ē̃̄, and nē̃ or nē̃̄.

The hard palatals do not occur, they having been replaced by s as in dialectic Gujarātī; thus, sōrū̃, Standard Gujarātī chhōrū̃, a child; sōr, Standard Gujarātī chōr, a thief.

The soft palatal j is pronounced as a soft s or z; thus, junū̃, old, pronounced zunū̃. When j is followed by y in the past tense of verbs and in some forms of feminine i-bases, it is, however, pronounced as an ordinary j; thus, gījyō, (he) went; sōrjyē, by a daughter. Compare below. The same change occurs in dialectic Gujarātī.

The cerebral ḍ between vowels is usually pronounced as an r, also as in Gujarātī dialects; thus, khōrō and ghōḍō, a horse.

A y followed by a vowel is often changed to a jy; thus, sōrī, a daughter; sōrjyānō̃, of daughters; mayā̃ and mājyā̃, compassion; māryō̃ and mārjyō̃, struck, and so on. This secondary j is not pronounced as a z.

The sounds v and w are pronounced as in Gujarātī and Rājasthānī.

The letter h is pronounced in two different ways. When it corresponds to an h in Gujarātī and connected languages it is very faintly sounded, and often dropped altogether as in the colloquial form of that language; thus, hū̃ atō̃, Standard Gujarātī hū̃ hatō̃, I was. H is, however, also regularly substituted for every s in the corresponding Gujarātī word. This h is pronounced as a guttural h, like the ch in 'loch' or in the German 'ich.' It has been transliterated as an h. Thus, hōnū̃, Gujarātī sōnū̃, gold, bēh, Gujarātī bēs, sit. In Gujarātī dialects s regularly becomes h.

Soft consonants are often replaced by the corresponding hard ones. Thus, ṭāhī̃ and ḍāhī̃, a cow; līḍū̃ and lītū̃, taken; up̄vū̃ and ubū̃ thāvū̃, to stand. The soft palatal j is said to be often pronounced as an s. Usually, however, the soft consonant which is changed to a hard one is an aspirate. Thus, ghēr, ger, and khēr, house; ghōḍō̃ and khōḍō̃, a horse; thām̄vū̃ and dhām̄vū̃, to run; thōlū̃ and dhōlū̃, white; bhāī̃ and phāī̃, a brother, and so on.

The principal features of the Bhilī dialect will be seen from the short grammatical sketch which follows. For further details the student is referred to Rev. Chas. S. Thompson's Rudiments of the Bhilī Language quoted under Authorities, above.

Present definite.—hū paḍū hū, I am falling.

Imperfect.—hū paḍtō atō, I was falling.

Perfect.—hū paḍjyō hū, I have fallen.

Pluperfect.—hū paḍjyō atō, I had fallen.

The present conjunctive is also used as an ordinary present. The past participle passive has sometimes the forms paḍiyō, paḍyō, and paḍō.

Similarly are inflected all regular verbs. The past tense of transitive verbs agrees with the object; thus, waṇṇē puñjī āiyi he gave his property; aṇṇē ī-nē mōkaljō, he sent him.

C.—Irregular Verbs.

Several verbs form their past tense irregularly. Thus,— karwū, to do, past kīdō.

khāwū, to eat, „ khādō.
jāwū, to go, „ gijyō.
dākhwū, to see, „ dīhō.
dīwū, to give, „ dīdō.
nāhū, to run away, „ nāhō.

pēhū, to enter, past pēhō.
pīwū, to drink, „ pīdō.
bīwū, to fear, „ bīnō.
bēhū, to sit, „ bēhō.
marwū, to die, „ muō.
līwū, to take, „ līdō.

Occasionally we also find forms such as rihānō, he got angry; marānō, beaten, etc.

Passive Voice.—Formed by adding ā to the base; thus, karwū, to do; karāwū, to be done; kēwū, we are called; kēwā, they are called.

Causative verb.—Formed as in Gujarati by adding aw, āw, and āḍ. When āw is added the verbal noun usually ends in ū and not in wū. Thus, wajwū, to sound; wajāwū, to cause to sound; bēhū, to sit; bēhāwū, to cause to sit; pharwū, to turn; phārawū, to cause to turn.

BHİLĪ OR BHILŌDĪ.

The dialect spoken by the Bhils in the Edar State, in Mahikantha, very closely agrees with the preceding skeleton grammar, as will be seen from the two specimens which follow. The Bhils of that district are commonly called Dungri Bhils, from the neighbouring Dungarpur, and their dialect is also known as Dūṅg'rī.

The first specimen is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second an account of the way in which the Bhils contract their marriages.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

We are called Bhils, and live among the mountains. Originally our forefathers came here and so these mountains are called ours. The marriage among us is performed in this way. The parents, cousins, and uncles of the bridegroom meet together at his house and then go out to choose a bride for him. Having chosen a bride in a particular village they go to her house and ask whether they would like to give their daughter to their son. If the parents of the girl are pleased with the offer, they give their consent, and wine worth one rupee is bought from the grogshop. All drink it together there, and then the parents return home and commence the preparations. In the first place the bridegroom is anointed with yellow turmeric, and the village people are invited to a feast of wine and kugri (grain and maize). After the feast is over they commence a dance and when that is over they return to their homes. Then they all go with the bridegroom to the house of the bride for the marriage ceremony. The bhābhī (brother's wife) of the bride joins the right hands of the bride and the bridegroom and takes them seven times round the fire. Now the marriage is performed and the bridegroom comes out with the bride and they all return to the house of the bridegroom. There the bride and the bridegroom are received into the house, and they again come out, after which the bride returns to her parents. After about a week the bridegroom, in company of several men, goes again to invite the bride to his house.

Bhili is the principal language of the hilly tracts of the Mewar State. It is almost the same form of speech as that current in Mahikantha. There is, however, a slight admixture of Mārwarī, especially round Kotra.

AUTHORITY—

HENDLEY, T. H.,—An Account of the Maiwār Bhils. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xlv, Part i, 1875, pp. 347 & ff.

The Bhili spoken in the Khadak District of the Mewar State very closely agrees with the Bhil dialect of Mahikantha.

We may only note a few peculiarities.

The cerebral l is no more used; thus, hāg^hlō for hāg^llō, all; kāl, for kāl, famine.

An original s is usually changed to h; thus, huēr, Gujarātī suwar, pig. But dēs-mā, in the country.

The neuter gender is usually replaced by the masculine. Thus, jē mārē pāhē hai vī tārō hai, what mine is that is thine. Compare, however, bē sōrā^h hatā^h, two sons (lit. children) were.

In the verb substantive hē has been replaced by hai. Thus, tū hai, thou art; ghaṇā nōkar hai, many servants are. Compare Mārwarī.

In other respects the dialect agrees with the Bhili of Mahikantha as will be seen from the beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows.

The Bhīlī spoken in the Kotra district of Mewar has been much influenced by Mārwarī, and may be considered as the link connecting that language with the Bhīl dialect of Mahikantha.

The materials forwarded from Kotra are rather corrupt, and the grammatical remarks which follow are therefore given with some reserve. On the whole, however, the texts are sufficient to show that the dialect under consideration is in reality, as might be expected from the locality within which it is spoken, a mixed form of speech.

The palatals have developed to s-sounds, and s has been changed to h as in Mahikantha. Thus, pās, five; vīh, twenty. Ohh is, however, often written instead of s; thus, chhōrō and sōrō, a son.

ḍ between vowels is pronounced as an r; thus, ghōṛō, a horse.

So far as we can judge from the materials available b is sometimes substituted for v and w. Thus, bēg'lo, far, but vīh, twenty.

The neuter gender is often confounded with the masculine; thus, kēhyō and kēyū, it was said; nānū, the younger son; hōnu, gold; rupō, silver, etc.

The plural of strong feminine bases sometimes ends in ī and sometimes in iyā; thus, ghōrī, mares; chhōriyā, daughters.

The suffix of the genitive is rō, or, sometimes, nō; thus, bāp-rō and bāp-nō, of a father. The suffix of the dative is nē; thus, chhōrā-nē, to the son. Occasionally kō is used instead; thus, nōkar-kō, to the servants.

With regard to numerals we may note the form ēk's, one. Here we have, apparently, the pleonastic s which is common in Jaipurī.

'I' is hū and mū, case of the agent maī, genitive mārō, mhārō, and mākō; plural hamō, genitive mhārō.

'He' is wō, oblique unā and wanā. The interrogative pronouns are kūn, who? kinā-rō, whose? hū, what? etc.

The present tense of the verb substantive is:—

Singular, 1. hū.

2. hai.

3. hai.

Plural, 1. hai.

2. hō, hai.

3. hai, hai.

The past tense is hatō and thō, plural hatā.

The finite verbs are inflected as in connected dialects. Thus, hū jāū hū, I go; thū jāvē-hai, thou goest, etc.

The past tense of transitive verbs is often combined with a subject in the nominative case. Thus, bēṭō kēhyū, the son said; mū gunō kīdō hai, I (instead of maī, by-me) sin done is, etc.

The conjunctive present is often used as a future; thus, mū jāū, I will go. The true future is formed from this tense by adding gō, plural gā. Thus, hū kuṭū-gō, I shall strike.

The verbal noun ends in wō, oblique wā; thus, kuṭ'wō, to strike; kuṣi kar'wā lāgā, they began to make merry.

Note also the causative form kēw'rāū, I may be called.

It is hoped that the beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows will be sufficient to show the characteristic features of the dialect. It will be seen that the spelling is rather inconsistent. I have, however, corrected all serious mistakes in the original, where the Dēvanāgarī text in numerous instances was at variance with the transliteration.

GIRĀSIĀ OR NYĀR.

The Bhil dialect spoken in the eastern part of Marwar and Malani along the hills bordering on Merwara and Mewar is known as the Nyār-kī-bōlī, or Nyār dialect. It is also spoken in the south-eastern corner of the Sirohi State, where it is known as Girāsīā.

The most characteristic feature of this dialect is the frequency with which ē is substituted for other vowels; thus, dhēn, wealth; dēn, day; kērē-nē, having done. In words such as husēlō or huslō, son; āpēnō and āp'nō, own, etc., the ē is probably short.

Note also the frequent contractions such as unai for unā-ē, to him, etc.

The cerebral ḷ has been replaced by the dental l; thus kāl for kāḷ, famine.

The inflexion of nouns and verbs is, broadly speaking, the same as in the Bhīlī of Mahikantha. The suffix of the genitive is, however, rō as in Mārwarī; thus, nōkērī rō, of the servants. The future of kuṭwū, to strike, is given as follows,—

Singular, 1. kuṭu .	Plural, 1. kuṭā .
2. kuṭī .	2. kuṭī .
3. kuṭī .	3. kuṭī .

Note also the pronoun du, this.

On the whole the dialect will be seen to agree with the Bhīlī of Mahikantha with an admixture of Mārwarī, though not to the same extent as is the case with the Bhīlī of Mewar.

Of the two specimens which follow the first is a version of the Parable of the Progal Son. It has been received from Jodhpur in Marwar. Only the first few lines have been reproduced. The second specimen is a short folk-tale from Sirohi. It will be seen that both represent the same dialect.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there were two brothers, Khumjī Ṭhākōr and Prēmlō Nāwṭō. One day Prēmlō Nāwṭō took his arrows and said, 'O Khumjī Ṭhākōr, if we go on in this way we shall not make a name. Let us both go and sit down at the well. When anybody comes to draw water, we will shoot the water-pot to pieces.' So they did, and soon the queen Phulmātī came to fetch water. After having filled her pitcher she ascended from the steps of the well, and they broke her pitcher by shooting an arrow at it. The queen Phulmātī fled to the palace and loudly complained to her husband that her pitcher had been broken. Her husband then banished the two brothers.

At noon Khumjī Ṭhākōr became hungry and went home to get some bread. When he saw the proclamation of banishment, he thought, 'what is this? I will go and see.' He found that his father had written as follows, 'it is not allowed to drink water here. If you remain here and drink water, then you will drink the blood of a black cow.'

Khumjī Thākōr then went to his brother Prēmlō, and said, 'brother Prēmlō, let us not stay here and drink water. My father has banished us, therefore let us be off.' So they went away.

On their way they came to Ujjain. The king of Ujjain from his elevated seat saw the young men coming and asked them where they were going. They answered that they intended to serve for a seer of flour, and so he asked them to stay with him and took them in his service.

Now the king had a daughter. One day she was carried away by a tiger, and she cried out, 'make haste, make haste.' Khumjī Thākōr mounted a horse and hastened after her into the wood, and killed the tiger. Then Prēmlō Nāwtō arrived. Having killed the tiger with his dagger Khumjī descended into a well in order to wash his dagger, and Prēmlō Nāwtō pushed him into the well, so that Khumjī with his dagger fell into the water. Then Prēmlō Nāwtō brought the king's daughter to the king of Ujjain. The king asked who had released her and Prēmlō answered that he had done it. Said the king, 'since you have released her, you alone shall marry her, and the marriage shall be in six months.'

MAG^{RI} OR MAG^{RA}-KĪ BŌLĪ.

In the north, Nyār approaches Mār^{wā}rī and has to its east a dialect of that language which in some characteristics agrees with Bhilī, viz., the so-called Mag^{ri} or Mag^{ra}-kī bōlī. Mag^{ro} means 'hill,' and Mag^{ra}-kī bōlī is therefore simply 'hill-language.' It is the dialect of the southern, hilly, part of Merwara, and is spoken by 44,500 people.

Mag^{ri} in most characteristics agrees with ordinary Mār^{wā}rī. There are, however, some indications which show that the base of the dialect is identical with the various forms of Bhilī spoken to the south.

An h is often substituted for an s; thus, hag^{lo}, all; huraj, sun; dōh, ten.

The form diyā, eye, corresponds to dōyā or dōā, i.e., dōlā in Bhil dialects, such as Rānī, Nōrī, etc.

The inflexion of nouns and pronouns is essentially the same as in Mār^{wā}rī. The suffix of the case of the agent is, however, ē or nē, as in Mālvi and Gujarātī Bhilī. Thus, bhōlyē, by the son; bā-nē, by the father. This suffix is sometimes added to the adjective, and not to the qualified noun. Thus, vī-kē bā, by his father; thā-rai bā, by thy father.

The suffixes of the dative are ē, and nē or nai. Thus, bāyē and bā-nē, to the father; ēk-nai, to some one.

The suffix of the ablative is hū; thus, bā-hū, from a father.

The usual suffix of the genitive is kō; thus, bā-kō, of the father. In the case of pronouns we also find the suffixes rō and ṇō; thus, āp^{ro}, his own; mhāṇō and mhārō, my; thāṇō and thārō, thy. When the genitive qualifies a noun in the dative case it sometimes ends in ā and sometimes in ē or ai. Thus, gāw-kā Pātēlē, to the Pātēl of the village; vī-kē galai, to his neck; mharā bā-kai jaṇāē, to my father's servants.

The suffix of the locative is mē, mā or māy.

The following are the personal pronouns:—

	I	We	Thou	You	He	They
Nominative . . .	mhū	mhē	thū	thē	ū	vē .
Agent	mhē	mhā	thē	thā	vī	vē .
Genitive	mhāṇō, mhārō		thāṇō, thārō		uṇkō	uṇā-kō .

Other pronouns are kuṇ, who? kāy, what? jakō, who; jī, by whom; jāē, whom.

The conjugation of verbs agrees with Mār^{wā}rī. Thus, mhū hō, I was; mhū jāū-lā, I shall go.

Note finally the frequency with which the suffix dō occurs. Thus, dyādā, days; jōgōdō, worthy; muōdō, dead; gamyōdō, lost.

In most respects, however, Mag^{ri} closely agrees with Mār^{wā}rī, as will be seen from the specimen which follows.

was, again alive is; lost was, again found is.'

The Bhilī dialect of Ratlam, in many characteristics differs from the connected forms of speech to the west and approaches the neighbouring Mālvi.

The palatals are sometimes retained, and sometimes also changed to s-sounds. Thus, chāk^rrā-nē, to the servants; chhōrō and sōrō, a son. Similarly, we find both s and h corresponding to Gujarātī s; thus, sag^olō, all; das, ten; ham^ojān^owā lāgō, he began to entreat; hō, hundred, etc.

The cerebral ḍ between vowels is pronounced as an r; thus, ghōrō, Gujarātī ghōḍō, a horse.

The cerebral ḷ has disappeared; thus, sag^olō, Gujarātī sag^oḷō, all; kāl, Gujarātī kālḷ, famine, etc.

With regard to the inflexion of nouns it should be noted that the neuter gender is on the point of disappearing. Thus, we find hōnō instead of hōnū, gold; aṭ^olā wārṣā, so many years, etc. In the latter instance the adjective is put in the masculine and the noun in the neuter plural. Similarly we find jē mārō (masc.) hē tē tārū (neut.) hē, what mine is that is thine.

The plural of strong feminine bases ends in yā as in Rājasthānī; thus, sōryā, daughters.

The ablative suffixes are thī and ū; thus, bāp-thī, from a father; sabā-ū ūchō, all-from high, highest.

The usual suffix of the genitive is nō. Occasionally, however, the Mālvi and Mārwarī suffix rō is used instead; thus, wāṇī dēs-rā rēwāwārā-kanē, to a citizen of that country.

The personal pronoun of the first person singular is hū and mū as in Mālvi. 'We' is hamō, and 'you' tamō or tamē. 'He' is ū or wu, genitive ū-nō, uṇī-nō or wāṇī-nō; plural vī and vī-hēlā. The relative pronoun is jō and jē, case of the agent jēṇē. 'Who?' is kūṇ, genitive kī-nō, oblique kaṇī.

The present tense of the verb substantive is—

Singular, 1. hū, ū, hē .	Plural, 1. hai, hē, hā .
2. hē, hai .	2. hō, hai, hē .
3. hē, hai .	3. hē, hai .

Instead of hē we also find chhē.

The present and past tenses of finite verbs are formed as in other connected dialects. Thus, hū mārū-hū, I strike; tamō jāwō-hō, you go; uṇī-ē mārō, he struck. Note ū lāgō, he began.

The present participle is used as a present definite and an imperfect. Thus, khātā, (they) were eating; tū ma-ī-ē-kanē sadā rētō, thou art always living near me.

The future is formed as in Mālvi. Thus, hū mārūjā, I shall strike. The conjunctive present is sometimes used instead; thus, kahū, I will say.

The verbal noun ends in nō or wō; thus, jānō, to go; ālō, to give.

The beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows will be sufficient to show the character of this dialect as being a link between the western Bhilī and Rājasthānī or, more especially, Mālvi.

WĀG^aḌĪ.

Wāg^aḍī is the dialect of a Bhil tribe which is found in Rajputana and the adjoining districts. In the Mewar State we find them in the hilly tracts in the south-west. They are also found in the adjoining parts of Gwalior, Partabgarh, Banswara, and Dungarpur, and in the north-eastern corner of Mahikantha. A few speakers of Wāg^aḍī have also been returned from Rewakantha. The following are the revised figures:—

Mewar State	280,000
Banswara State	74,900
Dungarpur State	98,000
Partabgarh State	53,000
Gwalior Agency	2,000
Mahikantha	17,400
Rewakantha	75
TOTAL	525,375

Of the 53,000 speakers reported from Partabgarh, 47,000 are stated to use a mixed form of speech, called Mēwārī-Wāg^aḍī. No specimens are, however, forthcoming, and it has been found convenient to include the whole total under Wāg^aḍī. The language of almost the whole of Partabgarh is Bhilī.

Specimens have only been received from Mahikantha. They exhibit a dialect which in most particulars agrees with Mālvi, in the inflexion of nouns and pronouns, the verb substantive, and the various tenses of the finite verb. Compare forms such as mānakh-kē, to a man; bāp-na, to the father; bāp-kō, of the father; mũ, I; thō, he was; marũ-hũ, I am dying; jāũ-gā, I shall go. The past tense of the verb substantive is sometimes formed as in Mālvi, singular thō, plural thā, and sometimes as in Mārwarī, singular hō, plural hā.

It is not, however, necessary to go into further details. The beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows will be sufficient to show how closely Wāg^aḍī agrees with Mālvi.

The dialect spoken by the Bhils in the Dhar State of the Bhopawar Agency has been so much influenced by the neighbouring Mālvi that it might just as well be considered as a dialect of that form of speech. It will, however, be more convenient to deal with it in connexion with the other Bhil dialects with which it agrees in some characteristic features.

Pronunciation.—Final a (or ā) and ē are frequently interchanged, as is also the case in Khāndēsi and other connected dialects. Thus, ha and hē, is; karī-na and karī-nē, having done; yā and yē, this.

Ē and ō after long vowels are usually written y and w respectively; thus, jāy for jāē, he may go; jāw for jāō, go ye.

Wa is sometimes written for wō; thus, wa and wō, he.

The palatals seem to be pronounced as in the western Bhil dialects, that is to say, as s, z, respectively, with or without aspiration. This must be inferred from spellings such as par-dēch-mā, in a foreign country; chhīr-kār, government, etc. Compare also dim-dimā wāṭī hē, a drum is beaten, where wāṭī is the past participle passive of wāṭj'ānō, to beat. The corresponding verb in western Bhil dialects is wāṭj'wū, pronounced wāz'wū.

The soft palatal is, in western Bhil dialects, often confounded with the corresponding hard sound and pronounced as an s. The same tendency seems to prevail in Dhar where the emphatic particle j often takes the form ch. It is, however, also possible that ch is the Marāṭhī form of the word, which also occurs in Khāndēśī.

The hard aspirated palatal has become h in hēḍē, on the border; compare Gujarātī chhēḍō, border.

The same pronunciation of ch seems to occur in par-dēch, a foreign country, where it is written for an s. This latter sound has regularly developed into an h. Thus, hōnō, gold; bah, sit. It is often, however, preserved in writing; thus, das, ten; bīs, twenty. Considering the mixed character of the dialect it is very probable that s is often also preserved in pronunciation. Thus a list of words which has not been reproduced contains both hōnō and sōnō, gold.

There is a strong tendency to cerebralize dental sounds. Thus we find ḍhaw'ḷō, white; hūḍ, consciousness; huḷā, slept; vinā and vinā, the oblique form of wō, he. Compare Āhirī.

B is used as in eastern dialects where Gujarātī has v or w, thus, bīs, twenty; bāl, hair.

There is no marked difference between aspirated and unaspirated letters. Compare wā and whā, there; ādō, half; ka-na lāgyō, he began to say; nhāk and nākh, throw; mha-ka and ma-ka, to me.

Nouns.—The neuter gender has almost entirely disappeared. The only trace of it which occurs in the materials available is the form kadū, it was said. It is usually replaced by the masculine; thus, nāch'nō hunyō, dancing was heard.

Number.—The plural is formed as in western Bhil dialects; thus, ghōḍō, a horse; ghōḍā, horses; ghōḍī, a mare; ghōḍī, mares. Gāy, a cow, adds ā in the plural as in Marāṭhī; thus, gāyā, cows. Ab'dō, troubles, seems to be a Gujarātī form.

Case.—The oblique form is in most cases identical with the base. Strong masculine bases, which end in ō or ā, take ā in the oblique form. In the plural there is an oblique form ending in hōṇ (compare Mālvī hōn). Thus, ghar-ma, in the house; ghōḍō, and ghōḍā, a horse; ḍhaw'lā ghōḍā-kō khōgīr, the saddle of the white horse; nōkar-hōṇ-ka, to the servants.

The usual case suffixes are,—case of the agent, nē and na; dative, kē, ka, and kū; ablative, hī, hē, and sē; genitive, kō, fem. kī, oblique, kā; locative, ma and mē. Compare Mālvī. Occasionally we find forms such as ḍhōr-kēr, of the cattle; ghar, at the house; hēḍē, at the edge; bhūkō, with hunger, and so on.

Pronouns.—The personal pronouns are mainly the same as in Mālvī. Thus, hū and mē, I; mē, mē-nē, mayē, mahi and mai, by me; mhārō, my; but also mērī, my. The plural of the personal pronouns is ham and āpaṇ, we; hamārō, our; tam and tum, you; tamārō, your.

The demonstrative and relative pronouns have an oblique form ending in nā or na (or nā, na, respectively). Thus, wō and vī, that; vinā jhāḍ-kā nīchē, under that tree; yē and yā, this; iṇa kar'sāṇ-na, by that cultivator. The use of this form is not, however, fixed, and we also find forms such as wā, and vi-kī kar'sāṇ-kī lugāī, the wife of that cultivator. Vī in vi-kī is the base used before case-suffixes. The plural of wō is vī or vē, genitive vin-kō; case of the agent vin-na and vinā-na. Similarly are inflected yē, this; genitive i-kō; oblique iṇā: jō, who; genitive jī-kō; oblique jaṇā. The base ta occurs in tina man, kyā ghar, to that man's house. The relative jō is also used as a demonstrative. Thus, jō hag^olā mhārā-kana hē jō thārā-j hē, what all of-me-near is that thine-only is, whatever is mine, that is thine.

'Who?' is kūṇ, genitive kī-kō; 'what?' is kāi and kyā.

Verbs.—The verb substantive forms its present tense as in Mālvi and some western Bhil dialects. Thus, singular, 1, hū and hē; 2 and 3, hē; plural, 1, hā; 2, hō; 3, hē. The corresponding past tense is, singular, thō or hatō (vhatō); plural, thā or hatā.

The old present is used as a contingent present, and it is inflected as in western Bhil dialects and in Mālvi. Thus, jāū, I may go; jāy, thou mayst go; plural, 1, jāwā; 2, jāwō; 3, jāē. An ordinary present is formed by adding the verb substantive. Thus, vī paḍa-hē, they fell.

The past tense is usually formed as in Mālvi; thus, hū gayō, I went; tum gayā, you went; bhūk lāgī, hunger came. The suffix na, which is common in Khāndēsi occurs in forms such as rihāṇō, he lived; bharāṇō, he entered.

The irregular verbs mainly agree with Gujarātī and western Bhil dialects. Thus, bah^oṇō, to sit; past baṭhō; khāṇō, to eat, past khādō; kaṇō, to tell, past kahyō and kadō; lēṇō, to take, past līdō and liyō, and so on.

The future is formed as in Mālvi. Thus, tū dēgā, thou wilt give; mīlagā, it will be found; lēw^ogā, i.e., lēōgā, you will take, etc.

The imperative agrees with Mālvi. Thus, jā, go; dai-dō, giving-give; dyō, give; lījō, you should take.

The verbal noun ends in ṇō, ṇā and wā; thus, ka-ṇā, or ka-wā, lāgyō, he began to say.

The participles agree with Mālvi. Thus, āw^otō, coming; rōṭā kar^oṇā, bread should be prepared.

The conjunctive participle is usually formed as in Gujarātī and western Bhil dialects. Thus, karīnē and karīna, having made; wāṭī, having divided. Besides we occasionally also find forms such as kar, having done; nhāk-kar, having thrown, etc.

The specimen which follows will show that the Bhil dialect of the Dhar State in most characteristics agrees with Mālvī, though it has still sufficient traces of a different origin.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A mendicant ascetic once set out to collect a seer of juārī (a kind of grain). He met a peasant who asked him, 'holy father, whither are you going?' 'My son,' replied he, 'I am going to look for a seer of juārī.' 'Then,' said the peasant, 'you may, perhaps, get five seers if you wander abroad, but if you will accept it from me I will give you a whole dhaḍī (ten seers).' 'My son,' said the ascetic, 'if that is what you will give, I will accept it; and in the meantime I will wait here.' So the peasant stayed on there the whole day driving his plough, and then both went to his house. When he got home the peasant foddered and watered his bullocks, and then, with a meaning look, said to his wife, 'the holy father is come. Make some good bread that we may feed him.' Then he left the ascetic (hungry where he was outside the door), and going in himself sat down to his evening meal. When he had finished his supper he turned in to bed, and with a wink to his wife said, 'go outside and have a talk with the holy father.' So she went outside to the ascetic and said, 'holy father, tell me a story.' 'Daughter of my mother' (a term of respect), said he, 'shall I tell you a long tale or shall it be a short one, for my belly is drying up with hunger? In the fields outside the village there is a three-legged deer. If your good man is anything of a swordsman, let him go out and kill it.'

Now, a thief used to steal sugarcane from a field of the headman of the village. The woman went to her husband and roused him saying, 'there's a three-legged deer going about in the fields outside the village. Get up and go and kill it.' The peasant said to the ascetic, 'holy father, where has the deer gone?' He answered, 'it is in the sugarcane field. If anyone kills it, he will get a reward from Government.' Now, that thief used to steal the headman's sugarcane every day, and on that day half-a-dozen men had hidden themselves in a corner of the field to catch him. When the peasant came they rushed out and caught him, the headman crying, 'this is the very thief, the eater of my sugar.'

Bye and bye, the peasant's wife began to ask the ascetic, 'holy father, when will my good man come back?'

Now, on that day a wizard was driving the devil out of a sick man, and when she asked the ascetic this question he replied, 'do you hear that drum being beaten in the village? They're dividing things there, and if you go you will get half the things they are giving.' So she went to where the wizard was driving out the devil, and hid behind the wall. Then began the wizard to address the invalid. 'Ask for your food and grain.' The woman cried out from behind the wall: 'O, but half of it is my share.'² Then three or four men jumped up and seized her as witch, while the wife of the invalid cried out, 'this is the beldame that is eating my good man.' So they bound her and marched her off to the judge's court.

In the meantime the ascetic waited there, at the door of the peasant's house. As soon as the coast was clear, in he went, ate up all the bread he could find, and let all the cattle loose from their stalls. Then stick in hand and wallet under his arm, he marched off to the court. He sat down in a corner and asked what theft the peasant had committed. 'Brother,' said they, 'this fellow has every day been stealing the sugarcane of the headman.' Then the ascetic considered to himself and said, 'brothers, listen, and I will tell you the story of this peasant. I was on my way to a certain village, and this peasant saw me and asked me where I was going. I said, "to get a seer of juāri." Said he, "if you go elsewhere you may get five seers or a little more, but if you will accept from me you will get ten or twenty seers of grain." So we worked at the plough the whole day, and at eventide went to his house. He gave grass and water to his bullocks, and said to his wife, "there is the holy father. Make good bread that we may feed him." Then, in he goes himself, has his bread and water (with nary a sup for me), spreads his bed and goes to sleep. All he does for me is to tell his wife to go and talk to me. He kept me hungry the whole day, so I sent him to the sugarcane field with a yarn about a three-legged deer to be found there. I told him that if he went and killed it he would get a reward from Government. I simply played this trick and sent him to the sugarcane field because he had kept me hungry. After a while his wife looked at me and asked when her husband would be back, so I sent her off to where the wizard was working his hocus-pocus, telling her that if the wizard should say "ask for your food or grain," she was to hide herself behind the wall and cry out "half of it is mine." By playing off these tricks upon them, I got them both into trouble. Now please let them go.' So the peasant and his wife trudged off to their home, while the ascetic took his way to another village.

² She mistook the meaning of the question. The wizard was asking the devil what offering he wanted. She thought he was telling the sick man to take all there was for the imaginary distribution. When she claimed a half share, the friends of the sick man naturally took her for some one in league with the devil, and acted with the promptness native to such an occasion.

The Bhil dialects described in the preceding pages connect the form which the language assumes in Mahikantha with Mārwarī in the north and Mālvi in the east. We shall now proceed to a group of dialects which may be properly classed as links connecting the dialect of Mahikantha with Nimāḍi in the east and Standard Gujarātī in the west.

Bhilī is, to a great extent, spoken all over Rewakantha. The principal dialect of the Sunth State is a form of that language. It is known under different names such as Anārya and Pahāḍī, and the number of speakers has been estimated at 43,500. A list of Standard Words and Phrases has been received from Rampur. It represents a dialect which is very closely related to that spoken in Mahikantha. It will be sufficient to draw attention to a few points in which it differs.

E may be substituted for ō in ghēr and ghōr, house.

With regard to the inflexion of nouns and pronouns we may note forms such as sōriyē, daughters; sōriyā-nē, to daughters; ād'miyō, men; amō, we; tamō, you, etc.

The present tense of the verb substantive is, singular, 1, hū, 2 and 3, hē; plural, 1, hē; 2, hō; 3, hē. The past tense is hētō or yētō, plural hētā.

The present tense of finite verbs is similarly formed; thus, hū mārū-hū, I strike; tu mārē-hē, thou strikest; amō mārē hē, we strike, and so on. The future of the same verb is, singular mārēh, plural 1, mār'hū, 2, mār'hō, 3, mār'hē.

Bhilī is the principal language of the eastern part of the district of the Panch Mahals, which consists of the talukas of Jalod and Dohad. Their dialect is sometimes, like other Bhil dialects in Gujarat, called Kālī Parājī. It does not differ much from that spoken in Mahikantha. The following points may be noted.

E is often used when the Mahikantha dialect has i or a; thus, ē-nū, his; tē-nē, by him; havēr, Gujarātī savār, morning, etc.

The usual suffix of the ablative is thō, inflected like an adjective; thus, hū vēg'lē-thō āiō, I have come from far off.

The plural of feminine bases ending in i ends in jyē; thus, ghōḍ-jyē, mares.

The forms amō, we; tamō, you; and tē, they; seem to be in regular use, no other forms occurring in the materials available.

The present tense of the verb substantive is sē in all persons and numbers. The corresponding past tense is hētō, plural hētā.

With regard to the inflexion of finite verbs we may note forms such as hamō mār'jyē, we strike; hamō jājyē-sē, we go. The past tense of jāwū, to go, is gyō, plural gyā. The future of mār'wū, to strike is, singular 1, mār'hē; 2, mār'hī; 3, mār'hē; plural 1, mār'hū; 2, mār'hō; 3, mār'hē. Note also the form ālē, I will give.

In most respects, however, the Bhilī of Panch Mahals is the same as that spoken in Mahikantha. Thus, j is pronounced as a z in the same cases as in Mahikantha; h has the same two sounds, etc. There are, however, no instances of the substitution of the hard for the soft consonant; of the past tense ending in jyū, etc.

The short specimen which follows will be sufficient to give an idea of the character of the Bhilī of Jalod. The dialect spoken in the other talukas of eastern Panch Mahals is stated to be almost identical.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Our cow had gone to graze in the morning, and the calf was left at the house. The cow licked it and thus showed its affection. (Said the mother), 'my dear, untie the calf. I will milk the cow so that the calf can suck.' 'O mother, don't take all the milk, leave a little for the calf.' 'Very well, dear.' 'Mother, I am very fond of cow's milk.' 'There, drink a little. To-night I will give you more with your supper.'

The Bhilī of the Jhabua State is very closely related to the dialect of the Bhils of the Panch Mahals. I shall only draw attention to a few points.

A final ũ is often lengthened to ũ̃; thus, hũ̃ and hũ̃̃, I.

Though the palatals are pronounced as s and z respectively we sometimes find forms such as chāl and sāl, go; chhēṭi and sēṭi, far. They can only be considered as attempts at a learned orthography.

The masculine gender is occasionally used instead of the neuter. Thus, āp'dō dhan, his property; hag'lo, all.

Feminine i-bases form their plural in iyē; thus, sōriyē, daughters; genitive sōriyō-nō. Similarly bairē, women, from baiyar, a woman. The oblique plural sometimes ends in ũ̃ instead of ō̃; thus, yō ghōḍō kēṭ'rā war'hũ̃-nō sē, how old is this horse?

With regard to personal pronouns we may note the plural forms hamũ, we, and tamũ, you.

'He' is tyō and pēlō, plural pēlā and tī, genitive tihũ-nō. Note also the oblique form tinā in tinā dēh-mā̃, in that country; tin-ē, by him.

The relative pronoun is jō, who. Who? is kōṇ, genitive kō-nō, whose?

The present tense of the verb substantive is sē in all persons and numbers. It is added to the conjunctive present in order to form the ordinary present of finite verbs. Thus, hũ mārũ sē, I strike; hamũ mārīyē sē, we strike.

The future of the verb mār'wũ̃, to strike, is formed as follows:—

Singular, 1 mārī .	Plural, 1 mār'hũ̃ .
2 mār'hī .	2 mār'hō .
3 mār'hē .	3 mār'hē .

So also hũ kī, I shall say.

Note finally the curious form kar'tēlō, he was doing. This l-suffix is common in Ali Rajpur. See p. 52.

The beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows will show how closely the Bhil dialect of Jhabua agrees with the form of the language current in the Panch Mahals.

The Bhil dialect spoken in the Ali Rajpur and the Barwani States of the Bhopawar Agency is a mixed form of speech, and in many characteristic features agrees with Rājasthānī, or, more especially, with Nīmāḍī. It is sometimes also called Bhilālī, or, in Barwani, Rāthavī Bhilālī. The Bhilālas are a mixed tribe, half Bhil and half Rajput, and the Rāthavas are one of the minor sub-divisions among them. With regard to the dialect of the Rāthavas of Obhota Udaipur, see below, pp. 60 and ff.

The Nōrī dialect of Ali Rajpur, on the other hand, is quite different and will be separately dealt with, see pp. 105 and ff. below.

The specimens forwarded from Ali Rajpur and Barwani, and professing to be written some in Bhilī and some in Bhilālī, exhibit the same form of speech, and they will, therefore, be dealt with together.

The broad pronunciation of a short a as ō or á is very marked. Thus, ghōr, a house; mōrū, I am dying; kōrīnē, having done.

The palatals and s have the same sounds as in Western Hindī. Thus, chāl, go; chhōrī, a daughter; jō, who; sāt, seven.

V, v becomes b as in Rājasthānī where Gujarātī and the Western Bhil dialects have v and w; thus, bīs, twenty; baras, a year.

The cerebral ḷ is sometimes changed to l and sometimes confounded with n; thus, kāl and kāḷ, famine; jōḷ and jōṇ, near.

With regard to the formation of words we may note the frequent use of the suffix lō; thus, wārū and wār'lū, good; ghōḍō and ghōḍ'lō, horse; ghōḍī and ghōḍ'lī, mare; uch'lō, high; hatō and hat'lō, he was; gayā and gayēlā, they went; khāt'lā, they were eating; mār'tō and mār'tēlō, beating, etc.

This use of the suffix lō is of interest because it agrees with the use of the corresponding suffix illa in Māhārāshtrī Prākṛit.

Nouns.—The neuter gender is very often replaced by the masculine, especially in Barwani. Thus, sōnū (Ali Rajpur) and sōnō (Barwani), gold; khōḷō kām, a bad deed; tārō nām, thy name.

The plural is formed as in other Bhil dialects. Thus, chhōrō, a son; chhōrā, sons; chhōrī, a daughter; chhōrī and chhōrīyā, daughters. In Barwani the plural of strong feminine bases ends in nā as in Nīmāḍī; thus, ghōḍ'lī-nā, mares. The suffix nā is also used in the oblique plural of masculine bases; thus, ād'mī-nā-nō, of the men.

An s is often added to the base, especially in Ali Rajpur. Thus, bās, a father; bēḷō and bēḷōs, a son; bhāī and bhāīs, a brother; bōh'ṇīs, a sister. Compare the similar pleonastic as in Jaipurī.

The oblique singular sometimes ends in ē or yā; thus, bāhāsē-n, of a father; bāhāsē-jōḷ, to the father; māṇ'syā-nō, of a man.

The usual case suffixes are,—case of the agent ē and nē; dative nē, khē, ka and kājē; ablative sē, sū, thī and kathī; genitive n, nō, and kō; locative mā and mō. Thus, bāhāsē (Ali Rajpur) and bās-nē (Barwani), by the father; bāp-kājē, to the father; dahāḍ'kyā-nē, to the servants; mē-khē, to me; sukh-sē, in happiness; sarag-sū, from heaven; kuwā-mā-thī, from in the well; bāhāsē-n, of the father; bāp-kō, of the father; Chānd'pūr-nō, of Chandpur; ghōr-mā, in the house; khēl-mō (Barwani), in the field.

Pronouns.—The following are the personal pronouns:—

mē-khē , mī-sē , to me		pōlā-kājē , tē-khē , to him.

Demonstrative pronouns are yō, this, genitive ērḥō, oblique inā; wō, that, dative ō-kha, oblique unā. A demonstrative base cha occurs in chō, that; chahā, there; chē, then, etc.

The relative pronoun is jō and jē, which. 'Who?' is kuṇ, genitive kuṇin; 'what?' is kāi, etc.

Verbs.—The present tense of the verb substantive is formed as follows:—

Singular, 1. chhū , chhāū	Plural, 1. chhē .
2. chhē	2. chhō , chhē .
3. chhē	3. chhē .

The past tense is hatō, hat^olō or hōt^olō, plural hatā, etc.

The conjunctive present of finite verbs, which is often used as an ordinary present, is formed as in other Bhil dialects. Thus, mē mārū, I strike; 2, mārē; 3, mārē; plural, 1, mār^ojē; 2, mārō; 3, mārē.

The ordinary present and past tenses are regularly formed; thus, pōlā jāē-chhē, they go; tuē māryū (or māryō), thou struckest.

The present participle, with the addition of the suffix lō, is used as a present definite and an imperfect. Thus, mē mārāt^olō, I am striking, I strike; khāt^olā, they were eating.

The future of the verb kuṭ^onō, to strike, is—

Singular, 1. kuṭis	Plural, 1. kuṭ^osū .
2. kuṭ^osī	2. kuṭ^osī .
3. kuṭ^osī	3. kuṭ^osī .

In Barwani the periphrastic forms mē mārūgā, I shall strike, etc., are used besides, as is also the case in Nimāḍi.

The verbal noun ends in nō, oblique nē (nyā, or ṇa). Thus, mār^onō to strike; chār^onē, in order to graze; nach^onyān nād, sound of dancing; jāṇa-nō man, intention to go. Occasionally we also find forms such as bhar^owā, to fill (Barwani).

The conjunctive participle ends in ī or inē (ina); thus, khāī, having eaten; kōrī-nē, having done; uṭhina, having risen. The final ī is sometimes dropped. Thus, mōr guilō, he had died.

The two specimens which follow have been received from Ali Rajpur as representing the so-called Bhili spoken in that State. The first is the beginning of the Parable and the second is the deposition of a witness. They have been prepared at different times and are quite independent of each other.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

My name is Kālu, and my father's name Nānkyō. By caste I am a Māwdā Bhīl. I live in Punyawat, Pargana Chandarpur, and am a cultivator.

Question.—Thy sister Bhūrā, the wife of Rumāl, who lived in Nahalipol, has died. Write down what thou knowest about the circumstances of her death.

Answer.—About a month ago Dēbryō Wasūnyā, a Bhīl from Nahalipol, Pargana Bhabra, came to me one day in the evening and said, 'thy sister has been ill, and has now died, go and look to it.' In the morning of the following day I set out and went to Bhurā's house in Nahalipol and saw my sister's body. I then observed two marks of a stick on the right side of her belly. I then said to her husband Rumāl, 'my sister has died because thou hast beaten her. I will go to Bhabra and make a statement in the police station.' Thereupon my brother-in-law and Chēnyō Taḍvī of Nahalipol and other men entreated me and said, 'don't go to the station. We will settle the matter about the murder for you.' Therefore I did not go to the station. The village council settled the matter and ordered ten piece of cattle to be given on account of the murder. Bhurā's corpse was then instantly burned in Nahalipol, but even now the cattle has not been handed over to me.

The so-called Bhilālī of Ali Rajpur is practically identical with the dialect illustrated in the preceding specimens. The beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows will be sufficient to show this.

The Bhil dialects spoken in Ali Rajpur and Barwani gradually merge into Nimāḍi. We shall now turn to the dialects which form the link between the Bhilī of Mahikantha and Standard Gujarātī.

The Bhilī of the Baria State of the Rewakantha Agency is known under the names of Bhilī and Rāṭh^{vi}. We shall first take the so-called Bhilī.

Our knowledge of that dialect is based on a list of Standard Words and Phrases which has not been reproduced.

'House' is always ghōr, not ghar or ghēr.

The palatals are usually retained; thus, chhōrō, a son; chandarmā, moon. Ch is, however, also changed to s as in other Bhil dialects of the neighbourhood; thus, pasāh, fifty.

The plural of feminine i-bases ends in īō; thus, chhōrīō, daughters.

'We' is hamu; 'you' tamu; and 'they' tē, tēō and tēhō. 'Who?' is kuṇ, genitive ku-nu.

The present tense of the verb substantive is 1, chhu, 2, chhē, 3, chhē; plural 1, chhiē, 2, chhō, 3, chhē. The past tense in hutō, plural hutā.

The future tense of kuṭ^{wū}, to strike, is 1, kuṭēs, 2, kuṭēs, 3, kuṭ^{sē}; plural 1, kuṭ^{śu}, 2, kuṭ^{sō}, 3, kuṭ^{sē}.

RĀṬH'VĪ.

The Rāṭh'was are a tribe living in the forests in the southern part of Baria and the northern part of Chhota Udepur in the Rewakantha Agency. They are said to be settlers from Rāṭh, a district in Ali Rajpur. Compare pp. 51 and ff., above. They do not settle for a long time in one place, but move from one tract to another.

Rāṭh'vī has been returned as the dialect of 8,000 individuals in Rewakantha. It is almost pure Gujarātī, as will be seen from the beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows :—

Note only the Gujarātī form tam-nē, to them. Compare Chāraṇī tēm-nū, their.

CHĀRANĪ.

The Chāraṇs are a wandering tribe in the Bombay Presidency. Chāraṇī has been returned as a separate dialect only from the Panch Mahals and Thana.

In the Panch Mahals they wander about in Halol and Kalol and are said to have immigrated from Kathiawar.

In Thana they are found in Vada, Murbad, Karjat, Bhiwandi, Salsette and Panvel. They are said to have come from Malegaon in Nasik.

Panch Mahals	100
TOTAL	1,200

No specimens have been received from Thana. The Chāraṇī of the Panch Mahals is of the same kind as the various dialects spoken in the neighbourhood, and can most properly be styled a form of Gujarātī Bhili. We shall only note a few characteristic points. L and n are interchangeable. Thus, ma-nē and mō-lē, to me; mō-lū, my; tō-lū, thy. In such cases l is sometimes written; thus, mō-lū or mō-lū, my.

With regard to pronouns we may note the forms ōlyō, he; ōlyā, they; tēm-nũ, their.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed by adding the verb substantive to the present participle, and not to the conjunctive present. Thus, hũ mār^{to} chhũ, I strike.

In most respects, however, Chāraṇī closely agrees with Gujarātī Bhilī as will be seen from the beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows.

AHIRI OF CUTCH.

The Ahirs or Abhirs are a class of cowherds in Cutch, and are found in the north and east of Bhuj, in the east of Kanthi and the west of Wagad. According to their traditions they originally accompanied Kṛishṇa from Mathurā to Girnar in Kathiawar and thence came to Cutch. Their number has been estimated for the use of this Survey at 30,500.

Ahirs are also found in Kathiawar and Khandesh, and, outside of the Bombay Presidency, in Central India, Rajputana, the United Provinces and the western part of Bengal.

The Ahirs everywhere use a local form of the language of their neighbours. The same is also the case in Cutch where their dialect is sometimes also called Ayari. Short specimens of it have been printed in the Gazetteer of the Bombay Presidency, Vol. v., p. 78⁵.

The Ahiri of Cutch is, in most characteristics, a Gujarāṭi dialect. In some features, however, it agrees with Gujarāṭi Bhili, and it has been found convenient to deal with it in connection with those forms of speech. In doing so the Ahirs of Cutch will be brought into relation to the Ahirs of Khandesh, and it will not be necessary to separate them from the Chārāns who look on them as their kindred.

The specimens printed below will be sufficient to give a good idea of the dialect, and it will only be necessary to draw attention to some points in which it differs from ordinary Gujarāṭi.

Gujarāṭi s is replaced by an h, which is pronounced as a strong aspirate, somewhat like the ch in German 'ach.' It has been distinguished from the ordinary h by _~ under it. Thus, hāt, seven; dah, ten; baih, sit. S and h are sometimes interchangeable; thus, tāp'hō, you will warm yourself; mār'sō, you will strike; sē and hē, they are.

Chh is often interchangeable with, and probably also pronounced as, s; thus, chhē, sē, and hē, they are; kar'chhō, you will make; mār'sō, you will strike. The writing of chh is probably due to the influence of Standard Gujarāṭi.

A dental d is commonly cerebralised. Thus, ḍi, day, ḍakār, famine; ḍāḍi, grandmother.

Cerebral ḍ between vowels is pronounced r; thus, ghōrō, a horse. It has been dropped in pyō, he fell, here agreeing with Kachhī, Panjābī, and Sindhī.

Nouns.—The neuter gender has almost disappeared; thus, chhōk'rō, a child; ḍik'rē bhanyō, it was said by the son. Forms such as hōnũ, gold, etc., are probably due to the influence of Standard Gujarāṭi.

The plural is formed as in Gujarāṭi, usually, however, without the suffix ō; thus, ghōṛā, horses. Note the plural of strong feminine bases which ends in iũ; thus, ghōṛiũ, mares.

The case-suffixes are the same as in Gujarāṭi. In the dative, however, nē is seldom used and commonly replaced by hē, and in the ablative the suffix is thō, which is inflected as an adjective. Thus, bāp-hē, to a father; tamē āw'tā kyā-thā sō, where do you come from? Chap'rērī-thō āw'tō hā, I come from Chaprērī. Note also the oblique plural of masculine bases which ends in ē and corresponds to Khândēśī ēs; thus, bāpē-pāhē-thō, from the fathers.

With regard to pronouns we may note the form mārē, to me (compare mārō, my), kūṇ, who? kē-nũ, whose; kāṇũ, what?

Verbs.—The present tense of the verb substantive is,—

Singular, 1. chhā̃ .	Plural, 1. chhaiē̃ .
2. chhō .	2. chhō .
3. chhē .	3. chhē .

S and h are often substituted for chh. See above. The past tense is hūtō, plural hūtā.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed by adding the verb substantive to the present participle and not to the conjunctive present. Thus, hū mar^otō chhā̃, I die.

The conjunctive present has the same terminations as the present tense of the verb substantive. Thus, hū mēlā̃, I may put. Forms such as hū vēchhū̃, I may sell, are Gujarātī.

The future of mār^owō, to strike, is,—

Singular, 1. mārēs .	Plural, 1. mār^osū̃ .
2. mārēs ,	2. mār^osō .
3. mār^osē .	3. mār^osē .

Instead of the characteristic s of this form we also find h, and even chh; thus, tumhē tāp^ohō, you will warm yourself; hū jichh, I shall go. The chh seems to be an attempt to write the Gujarātī form correctly, and the proper forms seem to be those the characteristic consonant of which is h, just as in the case of the Gujarātī Bhilī of Mahikantha.

The conjunctive participle ends in ū or ū-nē̃; thus, vēchū, having divided; mārū-nē̃, having struck.

Of the two specimens which follow the first is the beginning of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second a dialogue between two Ahīrs.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A.—Well, sit down, God bless you. Where do you come from?

B.—I come from Chapreri.

A.—You must have had a bad turn in the rain. Shall I have a fire lighted for you? It will do you good to warm yourself. May I offer you something to eat?

B.—No, I cannot eat now.

A.—Will it do not to eat at all? Take something, as much or as little as you like.

B.—I am thirsty. Give me water to drink.

A.—Shall I put your clothes out to dry in the sun?

B.—Yes, do.

A.—What may I offer you to eat?

B.—I told you that I am not hungry.

A.—But still, eat some khichri and bread.

B.—Well, if you insist, then order it.

A.—Is all well in your house?

B.—Yes, all are well, only my grandmother died the day before yesterday.

A.—What was the matter?

B.—Four days' fever.

A.—How are the crops getting on?

B.—There was not much rain this year, and so the crops are not good. How much have you paid for your bullocks?

A.—Four hundred and fifty koris.

B.—Will you sell them?

A.—Yes, if you pay me enough.

B.—I will pay you three hundred koris.

A.—Do you think that I will sell them for three hundred.

B.—I thought they were old and then the price was reasonable.

A.—When are you going to make the wedding of your daughter?

B.—When a year has past after the death of my grandmother.

A.—Stay in our house this night.

B.—Thanks, I must be in Dharang to-night.

A.—Then come to us some other day.

B.—Very well. Good-bye, I am off.

A.—My compliments to all in your house.

Most of the remaining Bhil dialects may be described as connecting the Bhili of Mahikantha and neighbourhood with Marāṭhī and Khāndēśī. We have already followed the line of Bhil dialects from Mahikantha down into the northern portion of Rewakantha. In Chhota Udepur and Rajpipla we find dialects which already show traces of Marāṭhī influence, and that influence increases as we go southwards. The Bhil dialects of Thana have, to a great extent, now become forms of Marāṭhī.

BĀREL.

The Bārēls are one of the Bhīl clans which inhabit the wild hilly tracts in Chhota Udepur in the Rewakantha Agency. The number of speakers has been estimated at 1,000.

The Bārēl dialect is of the same kind as other Bhīl dialects of the neighbourhood. It is, in all essentials, a form of Gujarātī. The Bārēls frequently come in contact with the Bhīls of Ali Rajpur and Rajpipla, and there is a slight tinge of the neighbouring Khāndēśī in their speech.

The two specimens which follow will show the general character of the dialect. The first is the beginning of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second is a short dialogue between a mother and her child.

The h which often closes the words in the specimens does not seem to be pronounced. Compare bāh-nē and bāh-nēh, to the father, etc.

Final ō and u are often interchanged. Thus, gōyō and gōyu, he went.

There is a marked tendency towards nasalization. Compare atū, I was; gōyū, he went, etc.

Note also the dropping of r in words such as mōy'lō, dead; kōh, at the house. The same tendency is noticeable in many neighbouring dialects and also in the languages to the North-West (Sindhī, Lahndā, and Pīśācha), all of which belong to the Outer Band of Indo-Aryan Languages.

With regard to the inflexion of nouns and pronouns it should be noted that the old terminations of the genitive and dative, hō and hē, have survived alongside the postpositions nō and nē. Thus, bāh-nō, of a father; ghōḍāhō, of a horse; mū-nē and mōhē, to me. Similarly also mōh-rō and māhō, my; tēh-rō and āhō, his. Note also the pronoun chyū, he.

The verb substantive is usually formed as in Gujarātī,— Singular, 1. chhū.

2. chhē.

3. chhē.

2. chhō.

3. chhē.

In the plural, however, the form chhatāh may be used in all persons. Compare Khāndēśī śētas.

In the past tense we find atā, hōt'nā, and hut'lā, they were. The suffix nā or lā is often added in similar forms, apparently without adding anything to the meaning. Compare khāt'lā, eating; din'lū and dinū, given; āpīnū, āp'lū, and āp'yū, given, etc.

For further details the specimens which follow should be consulted.

‘Our cow went to graze in the morning, but her calf stayed at the house. So she came and licked it to show her affection. Dear, untie the calf. I will milk the cow so that the calf may suck her.’

‘Dear mother, don’t draw all the milk. Leave a little for the calf.’

‘Very well, darling.’

‘Mother, I like very much to drink cow’s milk.’

‘Well, here is a little milk for you. I will give you more in the evening for your supper.’

PĀWĀRĪ.

The Pāwras are a tribe of cultivators in Khandesh. Their home is the Akrani Parganā round Dhadgaon. They are also found below the Ghats in Taloda and Shahada, and, in small numbers, north of the Narbada and in Kathi. According to information forwarded for the use of this Survey, the number of speakers of Pāwri is 25,000.

AUTHORITIES—

RIGBY, LIEUT. C. P.,—On the Satpoora Mountains. Transactions of the Bombay Geographical Society. Vol. ix, 1850, pp. 69 & ff. Contains a Pāwri Voc.

Gazetteer of the Bombay Presidency, Vol. xii.—Bombay, 1880. Short note on the dialect on p. 95.

VARLEY, F. J.,—A Short Hand-Book of the Mavehi and Pavra Dialects. Bombay, 1902.

The Pāwri dialect is a form of Gujarātī Bhīli. The Pāwras deny that they are Bhils and claim to be the descendants of the Rajput Pāwars or Pramaras of Dhar, and to belong to the Jagdeo and Udaisingh septs of that clan. They say that they have been settled in Khandesh for seven generations. In their manners, customs, and general appearance they differ from the other tribes who inhabit the Satpuras. A tradition current in Taloda says that they were driven from Pali or Palagad, a village on the right bank of the Narbada in the Udepur State, whence they migrated southwards and settled on the tableland of the Satpura, now called Akrani Parganā. Their northern origin is confirmed by their language, which has several points of connexion with the Bārēl dialect of Udepur, and with the Bhil dialects of Rajpipla, Ali Rajpur, and Barwani.

I am able to give two excellent specimens of this dialect, which have been prepared by Mr. G. B. Brahme, First Assistant, Deputy Educational Inspector, Khandesh, and have been checked and supplied with notes by Mr. A. H. A. Simcox, of the Indian Civil Service, to whom I am indebted for much valuable assistance in regard to the Bhil dialects of Khandesh and Nasik.

The general character of the dialect is well illustrated by the specimens, and I shall here point out only a few characteristic points. The first specimen is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second a conversation between two villagers.

Pronunciation.—The short a is often pronounced as an ō; thus, ōtō, he was; dōh, ten; nāchnēn hōmballō, dancing was heard.

ō is often interchangeable with u; thus, chō and chu, he; gōdō and guḍō, a horse; chhurō, a son. Though the ō is invariably marked as long in the specimen, it is probably often short. Thus, Mr. Varley gives chhoro, a son.

Vowels are often nasalized, as in tu or tũ, thou; āvē or āvē̃, I shall come.

An initial h is often dropped; thus, āt or āth, a hand; ōtō, he was; ōraṇ (= haraṇ), a deer. So also aspiration is lost in words like gōdō, a horse; gōr, a house; bāi, a brother.

Chh is probably pronounced as an s; thus, chhurō, pronounced surō, a son. Similarly j seems to be pronounced as a soft z. Mr. Varley gives zā, go, etc.

S has been replaced by h; thus, dui vihi-n dōh, fifty; hōnō, gold.

Note the frequent use of the suffix lō, which is also found in Ali Rajpur and Chhota Udepur. Thus, mōḷlō and mōḷō, great; hājḷō and hājō, good; maratlō, I die; gōyō and gōylō, he went, etc. This suffix does not seem to affect the meaning.

Nouns.—There are only two genders, the masculine and the feminine, the former being also used as a neuter.

The plurals of strong masculine and feminine bases end in ā and ī, respectively. Thus, chhōrō, a son; chhōrā, sons; chhōrī, a daughter, daughters. Sometimes we meet Marāṭhī forms, such as hāwǰē and hāwǰā, swine; warhē, years.

The oblique form is the same as in Gujarātī Bhilī. Sometimes it ends in ā or hā, (as in Ali Rajpur) as in chhurā, (to) the son; bāhā-n, of the father; and sometimes in ō, as in āthō-māy, on the hand; dēwō-n, of God.

The subject of a verb is put in the case of the agent, when the predicate is the past tense of a transitive verb. Thus, bāhē pōtān māl wāḷī dēnlō, the father divided (and) gave his own property. The usual case suffixes are,—

Agent and instrumental, ē.

Dative, hā, n, or no suffix.

Ablative dōkh (not dēkh as elsewhere).

Genitive, n.

Locative, mē, mā, māy, mā, ē.

Thus, bāhē, by the father (the property was divided); bukē, (I die) by hunger; bāhā-hā, to the father; māḷi-n, to a man; chhurā, (he said) to the son; bāhā-pā-dōkh, from near a father; tinā-mā-dōkh, from among them; bāhā-n, of a father; mālō-n, of the property; gōr-mē, gōr-māy, in the house; dēhē, in the country.

Adjectives follow the Rājasthānī and Gujarātī system of being put into the locative or agent case, when agreeing with a noun in that case. Thus, gayē inē warhē, in this past year; jinē chhurē, by the son who.

Numerals.—There are no numerals beyond twenty. ‘Fifty’ is ‘two twenties and ten,’ dui vihi-n dōh.

Pronouns.—‘I’ ‘by me’ is mī (Mr. Varley’s āy, etc., is not borne out by other authorities); mēhē, me; mārō, my; ānu, we; āmuḥu, to us; āmō, our.

Tu, tū, thou; tēhē, thee; tu, tuē, by thee; tārō, thy; tumu, you; tumuhē, to you; tumrō, your.

The demonstrative pronouns are chu, chō, and pōlō, he, that; fem. chī; obl. sing. tinhaḥ or tinā; tinā-n, to him; tinē, by him; tinā-n and tērō, his; chā, tinu, they. Compare chō in Bārēl and the Bhilī of Ali Rajpur.

Yō or yū, this; obl. sing. inā; yā, these. The feminine singular does not occur in the specimens.

Apnē, potā-n, or jūcō-n, own.

Kuṇ, who? kāy, what?

Verbs.—The present tense of the verb substantive is chhē. plural also chhētā. Compare Bārēl chhatā and Khāndēśī śētas. The past tense is ōtō, plural, ōtā.

Finite Verb.—Only a few forms of the old present occur. These are, āpē, I shall give; āvē, I shall come; āvē, he may come; kā-dōkh āpu, where-from shall I-give? pōdē, it falls; milē, it is got. The usual form of the present tense is made by adding lō to the present participle; thus, jāt-lō, goes; plur. jāt-lā. Compare Bārēl khāt-lā, eating. Bhilī of Ali Rajpur and Barwani mārat-lō, I strike.¹

The past tense is formed by adding yō or lō; thus, gōyō or gōylō, he went; pōḍyō or pōḍlō, he fell.

¹ Lō or lē forms a future in Rājasthānī and Naipālī, and a present or future in the Bhojpurī dialect of Bihārī.

The future is formed by adding hē or i in the singular, and hū or ū and hōt in the plural. Thus, bōhāt-i, I, thou, or he will strike; āpēhē, I shall give; lāghē, thou wilt begin; jāhē, he will go; bōhāt-ū, we shall strike, you will strike; jihū, we shall live; kuṭ-hōt, they will strike; ōhōt, they will become.

Another future ends in ṇē or ṇē̃ and thus has the same form as the infinitive; thus, jāṇē or jāṇē̃, I shall go, I am off; āpṇē, if I give.

The plural of the imperative ends in ā or ō; thus, bōhātā, strike; nākhō, put.

The verbal noun ends in ṇē and the conjunctive participle in i or in; thus, rākhṇē-n, for keeping; āpi, having given; kōrin, having done.

Other forms will be easily recognized from the specimens which follow.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Mōti.—Good morning, Pāṭil, good morning. Come and sit down. What is your name?

Muṅgā.—Good morning, friend. Why, have you forgotten? I am the Pāṭil Muṅgā of Junane.¹ We have met in Dhadgam.²

Mōti.—Yes, now I remember. Are you well?

Muṅgā.—How should I be well? I had six sons and five daughters, and now only two sons are left.

Mōti.—What has become of the others?

Muṅgā.—One son was killed by a snake; another went to bathe in the river and was drowned; the third died from cholera; the fourth was struck by lightning. One of the girls was killed by her husband; the second was eaten by a tiger; the third went mad and died; the fourth died of dysentery; and the fifth has run away.

Mōti.—Alas. That is very bad. A curse on God's mother.³ Thou hast not done well, O God!—How great are your lands?

Muṅgā.—I should want two and forty pairs of bullocks⁴ to cultivate it. It is assessed at hundred rupees. But what is the use of cultivating it. I cannot get a living out of it.

Mōti.—This year there will be good rain, and the crops will ripen well.

Muṅgā.—What is the use of a good rainy season? We had good rains last year, and then the rats came and ate the crops.

Mōti.—Is every time of this sort? (i.e. this time it may be otherwise).

Muṅgā.—What guarantee have we? A curse on his mother! Men do not understand God's doings.

Mōti.—You are right. But all care should be left to him who made us. When will you begin ploughing?

Muṅgā.—In two or three days.

Mōti.—How many labourers will you employ, and how much will you pay them a day?

Muṅgā.—Twelve labourers will be required, and each will get two pice⁵ and a half.

Mōti.—What will you sow this year?

Muṅgā.—I have sown Bādi, Bōṭṭi, Nāṅgali, Mōr, Haṅgari, Juvār, Bājrā, and Tili.⁶ But I shall not see much of them.

Mōti.—Why not?

Muṅgā.—Brother, I have a bad neighbour, and when I see him, I have no luck. Once he set my house on fire. I have also four other enemies, on the four sides of my fields.

⁴ The paisā in Khandesh is half an anna.

Mōti.—Who are they ?

Muṅgā.—To the east my sister's husband ; to the west my sister's son ; to the north¹ my uncle ; to the south² my wife's brother.

Mōti.—Do your relatives always vex you ?

Muṅgā.—What is the use of saying it ? If you give them something, well and good. If not, then they get angry. All the world is so.

Mōti.—Will you lend me twenty-five rupees ?

Muṅgā.—How should I ? I have not got them myself.

Mōti.—I shall pay them back in the month Kēlyō.³

Muṅgā.—Well and good, but I cannot give you what I have not got.

Mōti.—As you like it.—Who is this woman ?

Muṅgā.—My daughter-in-law.

Mōti.—Which ornaments is she wearing ?

Muṅgā.—Ear-rings and nose-rings ; a silver chain and her marriage-string round her neck ; Baṭṭis and tin bracelets on her hand, and anklets on her feet.

Mōti.—Is she with child, and how many months has she been so ?

Muṅgā.—Dear no, her stomach is so in itself. You are fond of joking. All our women look so.

Mōti.—Why so ?

Muṅgā.—It is so here in our country. Our bodies are slim, but the stomach is like a kettle-drum.

Mōti.—How many times do you eat during the day ?

Muṅgā.—Three times, in the morning, at noon, and in the evening.

Mōti.—What do you eat ?

Muṅgā.—On work-days bread of Bājri (holcus spicatus) and pulse of Uḍid (phas-eolus radiatus). On holidays we eat ghee and cock's flesh and drink liquor.

Mōti.—Are the girls brought to bed the first time in the house of their father-in-law or in that of their father ?

Muṅgā.—There is no fixed rule.

Mōti.—How many days must a woman stay at home after a child-bed, and how long does the child suck ?

Muṅgā.—The mother stays in the house five days, and the child goes on sucking till another child is born. But it is getting late, and I must be off. God bless you.

Mōti.—Do come again to-morrow. God speed you.

Muṅgā.—I cannot come to-morrow, but I shall come the day after. Good-bye.

³ The last month of the Pāwa year corresponding to Bhādrapada.

Bhili is also the principal language of the southern part of Chhota Udepur and of Rajpipla.

No specimen has been received from the former state. The Bhili spoken there is probably identical with Barēl. The Rajpipla dialect is connected with Barēl in the north, and with the various forms the language assumes in Khandesh in the east. Towards the south it is connected with the various dialects of the Nawsari division of the Baroda State.

The palatals are retained, at least in writing. Thus, pāch, five; chhēlō, far; pāchhal, after. Spelling such as khuchī, merry, however, point to the pronunciation of ch as s.

L is interchangeable with n; thus, mōk'nyō, he was sent; āgan, before; nāgī, she began.

The cerebral l does not seem to exist in this dialect. Compare kāl, famine. In dōyā, eye, however, it has become y as in Khāndēśī.

R seems to have been dropped in words such as kōinē, Gujarātī karinē, having done; pōy'nā, Gujarātī bhar'wū, to fill; and probably also in kō, Gujarātī ghar, a house. The last two instances show that a hard consonant is often substituted for a soft aspirate, just as was the case in Mahikantha. Thus also kōdō, a horse, etc.

Nouns.—The inflexion of nouns is mainly the same as in Mahikantha. The oblique form is sometimes used alone, without any suffix, to denote various cases; thus, bāy'chā, by a father, to a father, of a father, and O father. The plural of strong masculine bases ends in ā and ē, as is also the case in Khāndēśī. Thus, pōy'rā and pōy'rē, sons. The same form is also occasionally used for the neuter plural; thus, bhunḍē, swine; war'hē, years. Compare the corresponding ē in Marāṭhī.

The plural of feminine i-bases ends in iō; thus, kōdī, a mare; kōdīō, mares.

An oblique plural is occasionally formed by adding āhā; thus, chāk'rāhā-mā, among the servants.

The case suffixes seem to be the same as in Mahikantha. Thus, pōy'rāē, by the son; majurā-nē, to the servants; pōy'rīō-thī, from the daughters; mīl'kat-nō bhāg, a share of the property; dēh-mā, in the country; khētā-mē, in the fields. Note also the postposition dēkhē, from.

Pronouns.—The following are the personal pronouns:—

maīē , āiē , by me.	tuē , by thee.	tīō , tīā , tīē , tīān(ē) , by him.
mā , man , mā-nē , to me.		tīān(ē) , to him.
mā , my.	tō , thy.	tīā , tīān , his.

Demonstrative and relative pronouns.—tī, etc., that; tē dēh-mā, in that country; ā and āi, this; iān, to this; jē, which; jīā-nē, by whom.

The interrogative pronouns are kō-dō, who? ku-nō, whose? kā and kāi, what? kōdō has an oblique form kaḍā in kaḍā-bī, by any one.

Verbs.—The Verb substantive forms its present tense as follows :—

Sing.	1. chhū, āhē.	Plur.	1. hē, āhē.
	2. chhē, āhē.		2. hē-rā, āhē.
	3. hē, āhē.		3. hē-rā, āhē.

The final rā in the second and third persons plural seems to be an affirmative particle. Compare āv-rā, come; tū jāhā-rā, thou goest; āi kuṭē-rā, I shall strike, etc.

The past tense is hatō, ūtō, watō or hatā, etc., plural hatā, etc., or hatē, etc.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed as in Mahikantha. Thus, āi kuṭū, I strike; āi marū hū, I die, I am dying. In the plural we also find forms such as amō ṭhōk'tā-hā, we strike, etc. Of the verb 'to go' we find jāhū, (I) go, jāhē and jāhāy-rā, he goes; jātā-hā, (we, you or they) go.

The past tense is apparently regular, though the spelling is rather inconsistent. Thus, gayō, gōyō, and guō, he went; huyō and wuyō, he became; āpiu, it was given; pāp kōyu, sin was made, etc.

The future seems to be formed as in other Bhil dialects. Thus, jāhī, I will go; kōhī, I will say; mārūhū, we will strike; mār'hō, you will strike; mār'hē, they will strike. The future participle ending in nārā is often used instead. Thus, mār'nārā, we, you or they, will strike.

The imperative plural sometimes ends in ā and sometimes in ō; thus, āpā, give; āvō, come. Wuijē, let us become, is the ordinary present conjunctive in the first person plural.

The verbal noun ends in wā and nā; thus, tīān āb'dā pōḍ'wā nāgī, to him distress to arise began; wār'nā hāru, in order to tend.

The present participle ends in tō or in nō; thus, jīw'tō, living; kuṭ'nō, striking; khāt'nē ūtē, they were eating. The suffix nō is sometimes also added to the past participle passive; thus, muinō, dead; guinō, gone. Compare the pluperfect participle ending in lō in Gujarāṭī. Ālā, come, seems to be the Marāṭhī form.

The conjunctive participle ends in ī or ī-nē; thus, wāṭī, having divided; kōī-nē, having done.

The vocabulary is to a great extent peculiar. On the whole, however, the dialect is closely related to other Bhil dialects of the neighbourhood, as will be seen from the specimen which follows.

again alive become is; and having-been-lost gone was, and again found is.'

NAIK^ADI.

The Naikas or Naik^hdas are one of the aboriginal tribes of the Bombay Presidency. Most of them are found in the wildest parts of the Panch Mahals and Rewakantha. They are considered to be inferior to the Bhils in social position, and only partially lead a settled life. The rest of them wander about in Jambughoda, Chhota Udepur and other districts in the Rewakantha Agency, in the Nawsari Division of the Baroda State, and in the frontier tracts between Rewakantha and the Panch Mahals on one side and Khandesh and Malwa on the other. In the Panch Mahals they are principally found in the Halol Taluka. They are also found in the Surat District, in the eastern half of the Balsar Division, where they are sometimes confounded with the Dhōdīas or Dhuṇḍīas. Thus, some of the specimens received from Surat profess to be written in the Naikī-Dhōḍiā dialect. Compare Dhōḍiā on pp. 124 and ff., below.

Naik'di has been returned as a separate dialect from Rewakantha, the Panch Mahals and Surat. The following are the revised figures :—

Bewakantha	500
Surat	3,300

The Naik^{das} of Jambughoda speak almost the same dialect. There is, however, a certain admixture of Marāṭhī. Thus, the dative is formed by adding lā and nē, the singular of strong neuter bases ends in ā̃, etc. Compare wāchhaḍi-lā, for the calf; tih-nē, to-her; ākhyā̃, it was said, etc.

The short specimen which follows contains a conversation between a village woman and her child, and will be sufficient as an illustration of the dialect.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

My cow one morning was going to graze while its calf stayed at home. The cow then stayed and licked it. So I said to my child, ‘darling, loosen the calf, I will milk the cow so that the calf may suck.’ My child said, ‘mother, don’t draw all the milk, but only a little, and leave the rest for the calf.’ ‘Very well, darling.’ ‘Mother, I am very fond of cow’s milk.’ ‘Well, drink this drop. I will give you much milk for your supper in the evening.’

In the Panch Mahals Naik'dī is spoken in the Halol Taluka. The dialect is, to some extent, mixed with Marāṭhī, as was also the case in Jambughoda. The dative suffix lā, which is used in addition to the Gujarātī suffix nē, also has the form nā; thus, tī-nā, to him. It is clearly a borrowed suffix and occasionally also occurs in the case of the agent. Thus, putas-lā ākhyā, the-son-by it-was-said. Note also the past tense in lā and nā; thus, paisā āp'lā, the money was given; pāp kar'nā āchhi, sin is done. L and n seem, on the whole, to be interchangeable.

The beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows will show the mixed character of the dialect and how this mixture has weakened the sense for grammatical correctness.

 and lost gone, he found is. And they merriment began.

The Naik'dī dialect of Surat is still more influenced by Marāṭhī than was the case with the language of the Naik'das of Rewakantha and the Panch Mahals. Thus, we not only find the dative suffix lā in forms such as mā-lā, to me, but often also the Marāṭhī oblique form. Thus, dēsā-mā, in the house. Another dative suffix is dai; thus, māṇ'sā-dai, to a man. The genitive and the conjunctive participle are formed as in Marāṭhī; thus, paisā-chā bhāg, a share of the property; uḍ'wūn, having squandered; karū-nē, having done. Similarly also mājā, my; tujā nāw, thy name; rahun, to live.

The form mā-lā, my, corresponds to mā-nō in connected dialects, and shows the same change of n to l as we found in the Panch Mahals. In this connexion we may also note forms such as lāgin, he began; hōijīn, he became, etc. They correspond to forms ending in ēl and ēlō in connected dialects.

It would, however, only be waste of time and paper to go into further details. The character of the dialect will appear from the beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows.

MĀWOHĪ.

The Māwohis or Mauchis are a Bhil tribe whose home is in the West Pimpalner and Baglan Talukas of the Nawapur Peta of the Khandesh District and the adjoining parts of the Dangs and Baroda. They are sometimes also called Gāvits, and are mostly cultivators.

The Wārlis of Khandesh are said to speak a form of Māwohī. Compare Vol. vii. pp. 141 and ff.

The estimated number of speakers of the Māwohī dialect is 30,000.

AUTHORITY—

VARLEY, F. J.,—A Short Hand-Book of the Mavohi and Pavra Dialects. Bombay Government Central Press, 1902.

Māwohī is a dialect of Gujarātī Bhilī of the same kind as Chōdhrī, Dhōḍiā, Gāmtī, Rānī Bhil, etc.

The short a has the same broad pronunciation as in other Bhil dialects. Thus, bōhī, a sister; bōh, sit; kōi, having done, etc.

An h between vowels is usually very faintly sounded and is often dropped. In such cases the vowels separated by the h may be contracted. Thus, tōhō, tōō, and tō, thy; tyāhā, tyāā, and tyā, his; ēhī, ahī, and ē, I.

Vowels are very commonly nasalized. Thus, kōi, having done; bōlē-hē, he says; ē-hē, it comes.

An r is usually dropped between vowels; thus, kōi, having done; mōū, I may die; dūu, far; bōhī, i.e. bharī, having filled.

S is replaced by h; thus, dōhō, ten; bē vihi, forty; wōhatī, dwelling; nhā, run. Forms such as paisō, or paiiō, money, however, also occur.

Nouns.—There are only two genders, the masculine and the feminine.

Strong masculine bases end in ō or ā, plural ā or ē; thus, pōhō or pōhā, a son; plural pōhā or pōhē. Ā and ō, ē and ā, are, in the same way, interchangeable in verbal forms; thus, jāyā, they became; lāgē, they began. The plural of other masculine bases usually ends in ē; thus, ḍōg^rrē, cattle; ḍuk^rrē, pigs; māhē, men. Strong feminine bases end in ī, plural iā or iō; thus, pōhī, a daughter; plural, pōhiā or pōhiō; ghōḍī, a mare; plural ghōḍiā, etc.

The oblique form agrees with Gujarātī. Thus, pōhā-l, to the son; mauj-mā, in merriment. Often, however, it is formed from the genitive; thus, pōhiē, of a daughter; pōhiēl, to a daughter; ābōhōl, to a father, etc. Occasionally we also find Marāṭhī forms such as mulukhā-mā, in the country.

The cases are the same as in Gujarātī. The nominative is sometimes used instead of the case of the agent to denote the subject when the verb is the past tense of a transitive verb. Thus, tō ābōhōl ākhyā, he said to his father. The suffix of the case of the agent is ē, ē or hē, hē; thus, māhē, by the man; ābōhē pāngad dēni, the father-by a-feast was-given.

The suffix of the dative is n, l or lā; thus, ābōhōl, to the father; pōhāl, to the son; māhū-lā, to a man; pōy^rrā-hān, to the sons.

The ablative is formed by adding nē; thus, rānā-māy-nē, from in the fields.

The suffix of the genitive is hō or ō. The final vowel of the suffix is treated, in accordance with the rules for the inflexion of strong bases, as in an adjective. Thus mā ābō-hā kōlā āw^otyā-hāl, to how many servants of my father's; bhōg^owān-ē ihī, at God's, towards God. There is, however, considerable uncertainty, and we find forms such as tō ābō-hō gahā-mē, in thy father's house; pōhi-ē, of a daughter.

The suffix of the locative is mā, māy, or mē; thus, mulukhā-mā, in the country; rānā-māy, in the fields; gahā-mē, in the house. Mā is sometimes abbreviated to m; thus, mōnā-m, in the mind.

Pronouns.—The following are the personal pronouns:—

mayē , by me.	tuē , by thee.
māl , to me.	tūl , to thee.
mā , my.	tōhō , tōō , tō , thy.
amhē , āmē , our.	tumhē , tumē , your.

Demonstrative pronouns are ō, fem. ih, obl. yā, this; tō, fem. tī, obl. tyā, that; tyā-hā, tyā, his; tyāē, by him; ēlō or ēp^olō, that, etc. Similarly jō, who.

The interrogative pronouns are kū or kō, who? kāy, what?

Verbs.—The present tense of the verb substantive is,—

Singular, 1. haū , hū .	Plural, 1. hējē .
2. hai , hē .	2. hētā , etc.
3. hai , hē .	3. hētā , etc.

Or hē, hai, throughout. The past tense is regular, singular hatō, etc., plural hatā or hatē, etc.

The old present is used as a conjunctive present, an ordinary present, a past, and, after the negative mā, as a negative imperative. The ordinary present is also used in the last mentioned way. The old present is regularly formed. Thus, mōū, I die, I may die; rōhē, thou livest; ākhē, he said; mā sōdē, or sōdē-hē, don't leave me.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed as follows:—

thōkū-hū, I strike; thōkē-hē, thou strikest, he strikes; plural thōk^{tā}-hā or thōk^{tē}-hē. In the singular we also find forms such as jātō-hō, I go, thou goest, he goes; and in the plural jāhū, we go; jāhā, you go; jāhā or jā, they go.

The past tense is formed as in connected dialects by adding yō (ō), nō, lō, etc.; thus, gōyō, he went; lāgē, they began; ēnā, we came; gunhō kōlō hai, sin is done; kāyēl, was done; dēnāl, was given; gayōl, he had gone, etc.

The ordinary future of thōk^{nō}, to beat, is,—

Singular, 1. thōkihī .	Plural, 1. thōkū , thōkuhū .
2. thōkikī .	2. thōk^{hā}-hā , thōkī .
3. thōkī .	3. thōkikī , thōkī .

Other forms are dēī, I shall give; rōhī, I shall be; kōhū, we shall make. The form hōrī, I may be, seems to be miswritten for and identical with rōhī, I shall be.

The plural of the imperative ends in ā as in Khāndēśī; thus, dā, give ye; ghālā, put ye.

Other forms will be easily recognized as identical with those occurring in other Bhil dialects.

I am indebted to A. H. A. Simcox, Esq., I.C.S., for the two specimens which follow. The first is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second a folk-tale. Mr. Simcox remarks that the native who prepared the texts for him has to some extent been influenced by Marāṭhī, the official language of the district. On the whole, however, the specimens are relatively free from any admixture. The beginning of another version of the Parable, which has been independently prepared, has been added as a third specimen.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a Headman. One day he was irrigating his fields, when a crocodile came through the channel. The crocodile said to him, 'Headman, please hear what I tell you.' The Headman says to her, 'Tell what you have to tell.' She said, 'take me to the river; I will catch fishes and give them to you.' Then the Headman lifted her up and carried her to the sand in the river. He said, 'may I leave you on the sands?' She said, 'carry me into the water; don't leave me here.' Then he took her into the water till it reached his knee. The Headman said, 'may I leave you here?' She said, 'do not leave me here.' He advanced till the water reached his waist, and said to her, 'may I leave you here?' She said, 'do not leave me here.' Then he carried her further into the water till it reached his neck and said to her, 'may I leave you here?' She said, 'yes.' Accordingly he let her loose. She went down to the bottom of the water and got hold of his foot. Then there came a bullock to the water in the course of grazing. To him the Headman said, 'a crocodile has got hold of me, make her release me.' The bullock said, 'as long as I was young you acquired agricultural produce through me; now I have become old, and now I get no grain, no fodder; I won't release you.' The bullock drank water and went away. Then a horse came. He said to the horse, 'a crocodile has got hold of me; release me.' The horse said, 'when I was young you rode on me, I became old, and now I get no grain, no fodder; I won't release you.' Then a cow came. He began to tell her, 'a crocodile has caught me.' The cow said, 'what should I do? as long as I was young you got milk from me and drank. Now I have become old, I have no grain, no fodder; I won't release you.' Then there came a jackal. To him the Headman said, 'Jackal brother, a crocodile has got hold of me, do release me.' Then the jackal said, 'Headman, you are a fool. The crocodile has not caught you. She has caught the staff that is in your hand.' The crocodile got up, left the foot, and got hold of the staff, when the Headman ran off.

NŌRĪ.

Nōrī is the dialect of a small tribe in the Bhopawar Agency of Central India. It has not been returned as a separate dialect for the use of this Survey. At the last Census 346 speakers were returned.

I am indebted to the courtesy of Captain Luard, Superintendent of Census Operations in Central India, for a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son in the Nōrī dialect of Ali Rajpur. It was forwarded without an interlinear translation and the explanation is not quite certain in a few places. Some passages, moreover, seem to have been misunderstood by the translator. The text must, on the whole, be used with considerable caution.

The Nōrī dialect is related to Barēl, the Bhilī of Rajpipla, Pāwri and the Bhil dialects spoken in the Nawsari Division of the Baroda State. Compare the pronunciation of a as ō, the dropping of r between vowels, the loss of aspiration, and the change of soft to hard consonants in words such as dōh, ten; māinū, to strike; mōō, I die; utā and hōtā, were; kō, house; kōdō, horse, etc. The nasal pronunciation is the same as in Barēl; thus, hōnō, hōnu, and honū, he. The cerebral ḷ is occasionally dropped; thus, dōā, eye. The same word also occurs in Rānī, and the intermediary link is the pronunciation of ḷ as y.

With regard to the inflexion of the nouns we may note the use of the nominative and the oblique form in the same wide way as in Rajpipla; thus, tāa bāh kōa-mē, in thy father's house. The plural of strong masculine bases ends in ā and ē; thus, chhuā, sons; kuḍē, horses.

The commonest case suffixes are, dative ō; ablative rōtā; genitive nō or no suffix; locative mā, māy, māhi, and mē.

The usual personal pronouns are,—

mā , my.	tā(ā) , thy.	(ti)yā , his.
amē , we.	tumē , you.	hōnā , tē , they.

There are, however, several other forms. Thus māh, he; tiyā, thy; chhōā, his, and so forth. Some of these forms are perhaps due to misunderstanding.

The present tense of the verb substantive is given as follows :—

Sing. 1. hū .	Plur. 1. hōjē .
2. hōyō .	2. hōyā .
3. hōyō , hōē .	3. hōyā .

The past tense is hōtō, plural hōtā, with many varieties.

With regard to the inflexion of finite verbs we may note that the n-suffix is often used both in the present and past tenses. Thus, mānū, I strike; rōinū, he is; māinū, (I) struck; kāl paḍinō, hunger arose. It is also used after the present participle. Thus, jātnā, we go. Dētnū, was given, seems to contain a past participle passive dēt.

The usual suffix of the past tense is yō; thus, gōyū, plur. gōyā, went. The subject of transitive verbs is sometimes put in the nominative and sometimes in the case of the agent.

The imperative ends in ē, plural ā or ō; thus, āpē, give; bāndā, bind; mēhā, put, kānō, put on.

The conjunctive participle ends in i to which t or tē is usually added. Thus, khōi, having spent; kōit, having done; gug^oditē, having run.

The verbal noun and the infinitive are sometimes formed as in Marāṭhī and sometimes as in Gujarātī Bhilī. Thus, chārō, in order to tend; khāō, to eat; kōinū, to make.

The form gōy^onā, let us go, seems to be an infinitive.

For further details the specimen which follows should be consulted.

The principal language of the Baroda State is Gujarātī. A considerable portion of the inhabitants of the Nawsari Division, however, speak several dialects of Bhilī. Bhil dialects are also spoken in the Baroda Division, but no figures have been returned for the use of this Survey.

Eleven various Bhil dialects are said to be spoken in the Nawsari Division, viz., Rāṇī, Chōdhri, Dhōḍiā, Gāmṭī, Kōṅkaṇī, Kaṭhōḍī, Kōṭali, Māwchī, Naikḍī, Wālvī, and Wārli. Only the first five of these dialects have been returned for the use of this Survey. Kōṅkaṇī will be dealt with separately below. It has been returned from several neighbouring districts as well. Kōṭali and Māwchī properly belong to Khandesh. The former belongs to that group of dialects which gradually merge into Khāndēśī. See pp. 168 and ff. below. Māwchī has been dealt with on pp. 95 and ff. Specimens of Naikḍī have been received from Rewakantha, the Panch Mahals, and Surat. The dialect belongs to the chain which connects Bhilī with the broken dialects of Thana. See above pp. 88 and ff. Specimens of Wārli have only been forwarded from Thana. The dialect has there come under the influence of Marāṭhī and will be dealt with in connexion with that language. See Vol. vii, pp. 141 and ff. The Wārli of Khandesh are said to speak a form of Mawchī, and the same is probably the case in Nawsari. Kaṭhōḍī has also come under the influence of Marāṭhī and will be dealt with as a form of that language. See Vol. vii, pp. 130 and ff. No information is available about Wālvī. It is probably a form of Rāṇī.

The remaining dialects, Rāṇī, Chōdhri, Gāmṭī, and Dhōḍiā, will be dealt with in what follows. The estimated number of speakers will be found separately under each dialect. The number of speakers is, however, steadily decreasing. The Bhils of Baroda who emigrate from the hills into the more civilized portions of the state rapidly abandon their native tongue and adopt Gujarātī instead. The table which follows compares the estimates forwarded for the use of this Survey with the returns of the last Census of the Baroda State :—

RĀṆĪ BHĪLĪ.

The eastern portion of the Nawsari Division of the Baroda State is a hill country covered with forests. It is known as the Rāṇī Mahāls, i.e., forest districts, and comprises the Mahals of Mahuha, Vyara, Songhad, and the Wakal district of Velachha. One of the Bhil dialects of that district is known as Rāṇī Bhilī, and the number of speakers has been estimated for the use of this Survey at 87,540.

Rāṇī is a dialect connected on one side with Barēl, the Bhilī of Rajpipla, Nōrī, Pāwri, etc., and, on the other, with Chōdhri, Gāmṭī, etc.

We find hard consonants substituted for soft aspirates and an r dropped between vowels as in Barēl and connected dialects. Thus, kōḍō, horse; kō, house; pūta, devil (Sanskrit bhūta).

An h is dropped as in the dialects just mentioned; thus, atō, was. A cerebral l has been dropped as in Nōrī in dōā, eye, and so forth.

The oblique form is used as a genitive, just as is the case in Rajpipla and other districts; thus, bāh°kā, of a father. It also occurs as the case of the agent; thus, bāh°kā, by the father. We also find forms such as ā kōḍō kōtā waryō-hō āhāy, that horse how-many years-of is? where the suffix of the genitive is hō as in Barēl and connected dialects.

The ablative suffix dēkh Rāṇī shares with Pāwri and other dialects.

Māā, my, and similar forms, correspond to Nōrī māa, Barēl māhō, Rajpipla Bhilī mā, and so forth. The same forms are also used in Gāmṭī, etc.

The present tense of the verb substantive is āhāy; compare āhē in Rajpipla.

The present tense of ṭhōk°nē, to strike, is ṭhōkū-hū, I strike; ṭhōkō-hō, thou strikest; ṭhōkē-hē, he strikes; plural ṭhōk°tā-hā. Compare the Bhilī of Rajpipla.

In the future we find forms such as ṭhōkīhī, I shall strike; ṭhōkuhū, we shall strike, etc., corresponding to the usual forms in Rajpipla.

In some of the points just mentioned, and in several other characteristics, Rāṇī agrees with Chōdhri and the other Bhil dialects of the neighbourhood.

It will be sufficient to give the beginning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son as an illustration of the dialect.

CHODHRĪ.

The Chôdhras are one of the aboriginal tribes of Surat and the Nawsari Division of Baroda. In the former district they are found on both sides of Nawsari, in the Olpad Division in the west, and in the Mandvi Taluka and near Walod in the east.

The number of speakers has been estimated for the use of this Survey as follows:—

Surat	35,000
Nawsari	86,258
TOTAL	121,258

The Chôdhrī dialect in most characteristics agrees with Gujarātī Bhīlī. In some points, however, it differs and approaches Marāṭhī on one side and Khāndēśī on the other.

The short a is often pronounced as an open ō; thus, pōr^mmēhar, God; hōglō, all; kōrī-nē, having made.

L commonly becomes n, and the cerebral ḷ is always changed to l; thus, nōw^ddō, iron; nēdhō, taken; chān, go; kāl, famine; dōlō, eye.

The soft aspirates are commonly hardened. The aspiration is, in such cases, apparently very strong, and in the specimens received from Olpad we therefore find a second h added. Thus, khkhōr, house; chhhāḍ, tree; fhōg^wwān, God. The last instance shows that f is substituted for ph. This is only the case in Olpad, and is perhaps only a difference in writing.

A similar hardening of j occurs in ṭhōk^cchyō, struck; āp^cchyō, given, and similar forms of the past tense. Compare forms such as paḍ^jyyō, he fell, in the Bhīlī of Mahikantha.

As in other neighbouring dialects, there is a strong tendency to pronounce vowels with a drawl. The result is usually a doubling of the vowel and the insertion of a weakly sounded h; thus, phuhulāi, having died (compare Gujarātī bhul^wwū, to err); hāruhu, Gujarātī sārū, for the sake of; ātō and ātōhō, a father; dīkrō and dīkrōhō, a son, etc.

The inflexion of nouns is mainly the same as in Mahikantha. The neuter plural, however, ends in ē; thus, māṇ^hhō, men; hēṅg^ddē, husks. Strong feminine bases form their plural regularly; thus, dīkrēhē, daughters; khōḍiē, mares.

The genitive suffix is nō (or nō), but occasionally hō is used instead; thus, māārē kākāhē dīkrō, my uncle's son. This latter form is often used as an oblique base; thus, dīkrihē-nē, to a daughter. Compare, however, the note regarding the pronunciation of vowels above.

Adjectives, including the genitive ending in nō and the ablative ending in thō, are inflected as in Gujarātī. Strong adjective bases, however, often use a form ending in ē throughout; thus, māārē phūg, my share.

With regard to pronouns we may note the forms pōti-kō, his own, in pōti-kā khētā-mā, into his own field; māārē, my; āmē, we; tumē, you, etc.

The verb substantive has the same form in the singular and in the plural, viz., first person hām (or ām), second and third persons hā (or ā). The corresponding past tense is hutⁿnō or hōtⁿnō.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed by adding the verb substantive to the present participle; thus, ṭhōk^ttōm (or ṭhōk^ttō-ām), I strike; ṭhōk^ttā-hā, you, they, strike.

The past tense ends in yō, ō, chyō, and nō; thus, gō and ganō, he went; mōkinyō, he was sent; thōk^achyō, he was struck; man hōwa, his mind became, he wished, etc.

The suffix nō is often also added to the present participle; thus, jāt^anō, going.

The future of thōk^awa, to strike, is,

Singular, 1. thōkihī.

2. thōkēhē.

3. thōkii.

Plural, 1. thōkuhū.

2. thōk^ahā.

3. thōkii.

Another form of the future ends in wānō, plural wānā; thus, mār^awānō, I, thou, or he, will strike.

Other forms will be easily recognized from the specimens which follow.

The first is the beginning of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son received from Nawsari. The second is a translation of a well-known tale into the Chōdhri dialect of Olpad. The third is a conversation between two villagers from Surat.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A boy was tending goats in the fields. Once upon a day he playfully cried out for nothing, 'the tiger has come, the tiger has come; run, run.' Then all the peasants of the neighbourhood came running and saw that there was no tiger. The boy, on the contrary, looked at them and began to laugh. The poor peasants got ashamed and were very sorry. Afterwards on another occasion when a real tiger came the boy got afraid and cried out, 'a tiger, a tiger!' But the peasants did not believe him. Thereupon the tiger killed several goats.

If the boy had not told a lie and cheated the peasants so much mischief would not have occurred.

GĀM^ʔĪ OR GĀMAṬ^ʔĪ.

The Gām^ʔas or Gāmṭas are another aboriginal tribe living in the same localities as the Chōdhras. The estimated numbers of speakers are as follows :—

Surat	7,100

Gām^ʔī is closely related to Chōdhrī. The hardening of soft aspirates, however, does not seem to occur. Compare bhāg, share; bhōḍē, swine. L is not regularly changed to n; thus, lākḍi, stick; lā, take. R between vowels is often dropped, thus, kōinē, having done; mōōtā-hū, I am dying; duu, far.

The inflexion of nouns is the same as in Chōdhrī. The suffix of the dative is, however, l where Chōdhrī has nē; thus, ābbāhāl, to the father. The usual suffix of the ablative is rē; thus, tā-māy-rē, from among them.

'My' is mā or māā; 'thy' tā or tāā, as in Rāṇī.

The present tense of the verb substantive is,

Singular, 1. hētaū, hū.	Plural, 1. hējyē.
2. hētō, hā, hō.	2. hētā, hā, hē.
3. hēy, hē.	3. hētā, hā, hē.

The past tense is ātō, plural ātā.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed as in Chōdhrī. We also find forms such as ṭhōkṭā-hū, I strike; tō jā-hē, he goes; tō ṭhōkē-hē, he strikes; amā ṭhōkṭē-hē, we strike. Note also tō ṭhōkī, he will strike; amā ṭhōkīhē or ṭhōkṭhū, we will strike, and so on.

There are no instances of the suffix chyō in the past tense.

Note also forms such as muḍā, break ye; paḍā, to fall; morō, to die; chārā, in order to tend, etc.

In most particulars, however, Gām^ʔī agrees with Chōdhrī, as will be seen from the two specimens which follow. The first is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son received from the Olpad Division of Surat. The other is the translation of a well known story into the dialect as spoken in Nawsari.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

-An old man had four sons, but there was little harmony among them. When he was on deathbed, he having called his sons caused them to sit beside him, and having ordered a bundle of thin sticks, told each of them to break it. But nobody could break it. Then the old man said, 'now untie the bundle, and let each one of you break each stick apiece.' When they did so, they could easily break all. The boys wondering thereat, asked the father the reason. Then he said, 'when so many sticks were together, they were very strong, and so you could not break them. When they were separated from each other, they were easily broken to pieces. In like manner if you will live in harmony, nobody will trouble you and you will live in happiness; but if you quarrel and are disunited, you will be weak like each separate stick.'

DHŌḌIĀ.

Dhōḍiā is the dialect spoken by the Dhōḍias or Dhunḍias, one of the aboriginal tribes of Surat and Thana. They are chiefly found in the eastern parts of Jalalpur and Balsar, the western half of Dharampur and Bansda of Surat, and in the adjoining districts of Baroda and Thana. In the specimens received from Jalalpur their dialect is called Dhōḍiā-Naiki; compare Nāik^aḍi, above, pp. 88 ff.

The following are the revised figures:—

Like Nāik^aḍi, Dhōḍiā has been influenced by the neighbouring Marāṭhī. Thus the singular of strong neuter bases usually ends in ā and there are some instances of the use of the Marāṭhī oblique form. Thus, badhā, all; but sōnū, gold; gāwā-mā, in a village; but muluk-mā, in the country.

The case suffixes are generally the same as in Gujarātī. Thus, pōhē, by the son; bā-nē, to the father; māṇ^ahāē, to a man; bā-thī, from a father; pōhī-nō, of a daughter; bā-nē ghar-mā, in the father's house. The dative is sometimes apparently formed without any suffix, and the genitive occasionally ends in hō or ō; thus, bāh, to the father; mā, to me; pōhīhō, of a daughter; Par^amēharā^a pāp, sin against God. The suffix of the ablative is sometimes the thō of northern Gujarātī, which is declined like an adjective; thus, tiyā-mā^a-thā^a vīh^a rupiyā, twenty rupees from among them.

The following are the principal pronominal forms:—

Mē, I, by me; mā, me, to me; māṇō, my; āmu, āmū, we, by us; āmā, us, to us; ām^aṇō, our.

Tu, tū, thou, by thee; tuwā, thee, to thee; tūṇō, thy; tumī, you, by you; tumā, you, to you; tum^aṇō, your.

Tē, tō, he, that, etc.; tēṇē, by him; tā, tē, him, it, etc.; tāṇō, of him, etc.; tē, tī, they; tī or tēṇē, by them; tiyā-mā^a, in them; tāṇō, of them.

Ō, this; plural ē. Jē, who, what, plural jī. Kuṇ, who? kā, kahā, what? kōṇē, by anyone.

The present tense of the verb substantive is as follows:—

Sing.	Plur.
1. āhā , āhē , āy , āē .	āhū , āū .
2. āhē , āy , āē .	āhā , ā .
3. āhē , āy , āē .	āhē , āy , āē .

The Past Tense is atō (-ā, -ī)

In the conjugation of all verbs, the letter h is often suffixed to the second person singular, although it does not always appear in the paradigms. Thus, gōh, thou wentest; bhaṇ^ajāh, learn (imperative); kar^ajāh, do (imperative); māgēh, thou mayest ask.

The following is the present tense of the verb baḍ^hwū (imperative baḍāw), to beat.

Sing.	Plur.
1. baḍ^hvē.	baḍ^hwū.
2. baḍ^hvē.	baḍ^hwā.
3. baḍ^hvē.	baḍ^hvē.

The present definite is formed from the present participle. Thus, tu baḍaṭēlā or baḍ^hvēlāē, thou strikest ; āmi baḍaṭ^htā, we strike ; tumī baḍaṭ^htā, you strike. The verb substantive is added in order to form a present definite ; thus, mē marēlāy, I am dying.

The form baḍaṭēlā or baḍ^hvēlā, striking, corresponds to Marāṭhī forms such as mārīt, striking. It will be seen that the plural is formed from a participle baḍaṭ^htā, which corresponds to Marāṭhī mārat. The use of different forms in the singular and the plural is perhaps due to the influence of the old present. Some lists of words which have not been reproduced record forms such as mē karēt-āhē, I do ; hamī mārūt-āhū, we strike. Such forms look like a compromise between the Gujarātī and Marāṭhī forms, and are perhaps the first step towards the distinguishing of the singular and plural forms just mentioned.

The imperfect is formed by adding hatō (not atō), etc., to the present participle. The initial h is combined with the final t of the present participle into one letter, th (u). Thus, mē baḍ^hvēthatō, or mē baḍ^hvē thatō, I was striking.

The future of baḍaṭ^hwū or baḍ^hwū, to strike, is formed as follows :—

Sing.	Plur.
1. baḍ^hṭi, baḍ^hvī.	baḍ^hṭū, baḍ^hwū.
2. baḍ^hṭh, baḍ^hvīh.	baḍ^hṭā, baḍ^hwā.
3. baḍ^hṭi, baḍ^hvī.	baḍ^hṭi, baḍ^hvī.

Besides this, we also find forms such as ākhāh, I will say.

Tenses are formed from the past participle in the usual way, transitive verbs taking the passive construction. The past participle is formed by adding nō, ō (yō), or ēlō. Thus, paḍ^hnō, he fell ; gō, he went ; gōā or guā, they went ; mē baḍ^htyō, I struck ; tēpē baḍ^hwō or baḍ^hvēlō, they struck. Note forms such as āikhā, for ākhyā, it was said. Such also occur in the Gujarātī of Surat.

'I have struck' is mē baḍ^hwō-āhē. Or vī or bī may be added to the past participle, as in kadhēlā-bī, they have been made.

Amongst irregular past participles, we can quote dēdhēlō, given ; kadhēlō, done ; and gō, gone.

Verbal nouns, such as karū, to do ; chārū-lāg, in order to tend, point to the influence of Marāṭhī. Besides we also find forms such as baḍaṭ^hwū or baḍ^hwū, to strike.

The general character of the dialect will be seen from the two specimens which follow. The first is a version of the commencement of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second is a village scene in which a village banker duns one of his clients.

3. D.—I your Banker. Open the door and come out.
4. K.—Ho! Is it you Sēth? What brings you here so late at night?
5. D.—Well, bring the money you owe me with the interest.
6. K.—What amount do you want?
7. D.—Look here! R40 for the bullock I got you, R60 given to you for marrying your brother, and R20 given to you for subsistence. Bring R150 in all.
8. K.—What became of the 3 *hārās*¹ of rice I gave you from my fields?
9. D.—Well! I set off R40 on that account against the interest.
10. K.—Hum! So many rupees for interest of 10 months?
11. D.—I swear by your patron God that the interest amounts to R60; but I allow you a remission of R20 therefrom, as you are my old client.
12. K.—Wait! Let me call my son Raḍkā. He is educated and will cast up the accounts.
13. Raḍkā.—Have you credited in your account book the sums paid to you from time to time, or not?
14. D.—See. Here is the account!
15. R.—Where are the amounts paid credited?
 You keep false accounts and cheat us poor people. Your due comes to simply R50. Just come to the police court and you will see.
16. D.—Well, do you want to pay R50 even or not?
17. R.—R50, by all means. Pass a receipt and take your money.
18. D.—Raḍkā! As you have just learnt to read and write, have you got wind in your head, eh? What humbug has Government started by educating you? What shall we do when you take to real learning?
19. R.—You will reap what you sow. The Government has after all done the right thing.

KŌNKAṆĪ.

The Kōnkaṇis are a tribe which is found in the Nawsari Division of the Baroda State, the eastern part of Dharampur and Bansda in the Surat Agency, in the Surgana State, in Talukas Peint and Kalwan of district Nasik, and in Khandesh, especially in Pimpalner. The estimated numbers of speakers are as follows :—

Nawsari	5,613
Surat Agency	125,000
Surgana	9,000
Nasik	78,000
Khandesh	15,000
TOTAL	232,613

The Kōnkaṇis consider themselves as superior to the Bhils and say that their ancestors originally came from the Konkan. Their appearance resembles that of the Konkan Thākurs.

The Kōnkaṇī dialect is not uniform in all districts. As we proceed southwards it more and more approaches Marāṭhī, and in Dharampur and the southern part of Taluka Peint of Nasik it might with equal right be classed as a Marāṭhī dialect. The influence of Marāṭhī, in the form which that language assumes in the Northern Konkan, is, however, traceable everywhere, though the base of the Kōnkaṇī dialect is Gujarātī, or rather Gujarātī Bhīlī.

There is a strong tendency to nasalize vowels. Thus, āhā and āhā̃, he is; ra and rā̃, a particle of frequent use in queries and exhortations. Compare the corresponding rē in the Magahī dialect of Bihārī (Vol. v, Pt. ii, p. 30).

The mixed character of the dialect is easily recognizable in the inflexional forms.

Thus the oblique form is usually identical with the base, as is also the case in Gujarātī. Occasionally, however, and especially in Dharampur, we find forms such as mān'sā-lā, to a man.

The suffixes of the dative are nē and lā; those of the genitive nā and chā; thus, bāhās-chā and bāhās-nā, of the father. The suffix chā of the genitive does not, however, seem to occur in Nawsari. Similarly we find ghōḍō and ghōḍā, a horse, and so on.

'My' is mā-nā and mā-jā, or mājhā.

The past tense of finite verbs is usually formed as in Gujarātī Bhīlī; thus, giyā, he went; paḍnō, he fell. Note that the neuter form ends in ā̃ as in the Marāṭhī of the Konkan; thus, sāṅgā̃, it was said. Marāṭhī forms such as jhālā, he became; mār'la, it was struck, however, are of frequent occurrence, especially in Dharampur and Nasik.

The future is formed as in Marāṭhī; thus, kuṭin, I shall strike; ākhan, I shall say.

The plural of the imperative is formed as in Marāṭhī; thus, ghālā, put ye.

The conjunctive participle is sometimes, especially in Nawsari, formed as in Gujarātī Bhīlī, and sometimes as in Marāṭhī; thus, karinē, having done; wāṭun, having divided. In Bansda we also find forms such as khāi-han, having eaten; compare Khāndēśī khāi-san, and the change of s to h in the Gujarātī Bhīlī of Mahikantha.

It will not, however, be necessary to go into further details. It will be sufficient to give short specimens of the various forms of the dialect. The first specimen which follows is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son received from Nawsari. It is comparatively free from Marāṭhī elements. The second one is a short conversation between two Bhils received from Surgana, for which I am indebted to Mr. A. H. A. Simcox, I.C.S. It is more mixed up with Marāṭhī. Mr. Simcox, however, states that this may to some extent be due to the fact that the young chiefs who assisted him in preparing it had been educated in Marāṭhī schools.

The third specimen is the beginning of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son received from Dharampur. The Marāṭhī element is here exceptionally strong. This may, however, be due to similar reasons as those just alluded to with regard to the Surgana specimen.

Naik'dī and Kōnkaṇī may be considered as the last links in the chain connecting the Bhilī of Mahikantha with the broken Marāṭhī dialects of Thana. In Nasik Kōnkaṇī gradually merges into Kbāndēśī, the principal language of Khandesh and the adjoining parts of Nasik, Buldana, and Nimar. Some Bhil dialects spoken in these districts are almost identical with Khāndēśī, and they will be dealt with in what follows :—

PANCHĀLĪ.

The Panchals, or brass-workers, of Buldana have been reported to speak a separate dialect called Panchālī. The number of speakers has been estimated at 560.

A version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son in Panchālī has been received from the Melkapur Taluka on the Khandesh border of Buldana. It exhibits a form of speech which, in many points, is related to Khāndēśī, though of a much more mixed nature.

The pronunciation is apparently the same as in Khāndēśī. It should, however, be noted that final ā and ō or u are frequently interchanged. Thus, pōryā and pōryō, a son; tārā, tārō and tāru, thy; gayō and gayā, he went; hāt-mō, on the hand; āṅg-ma, on the body, etc.

The inflexion of nouns differs from Khāndēśī in so far as there are no traces of the oblique plural ending in s; thus, chāṅg^{lyā} mānus-na, of good men.

The case of the agent is formed by adding nē, na, or ē; the dative by adding na; the locative by adding ma, etc. Thus, bāp-nē and bāpē, by the father; mānus-na, by the man, to the man; wāwar-ma, in the field. Note also yē ritan, in this way.

There is apparently no neuter gender. Compare gāṇō aiku āi, singing to-hear came; pēṭ bharē as^{tu}, he would have filled his belly; i-na ēk nōkar-na puchī, he asked a servant.

Pronouns.—‘I’ is hū as in Gujarātī and Mālvī; ‘my’ is mārā; ‘thy’ tārā and tōrō; ‘his’ u-na; ‘your’ tumārō, and so on. Note also ō, he; u-na and tī-nē, by him; yē, this; yē-kyō, to this; jē, who, etc.

The verb substantive is chha as in Gujarātī and the Khāndēśī of Nimar. Chha (or chhē) is used for all persons and numbers of the present tense. The past tense is, singular, 1, hōtō, or tō; 2, hōtās; 3, hōtō, hōtā, thō, and huyā; plural, 1, hōtō; 2, hōtā; 3, hōtā.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed by adding chha to the old present; thus, hū jāu-chha, I go; tu jāi-chha, thou goest; ō jāi-chha, he goes. Other forms are hū maras, I die; tu rahī-ch, thou remainest; ō āwas, he comes; hāmī mārū, we strike; hū mārās chhē, I am striking.

The past tense is formed by adding the suffixes ā or yā; thus, ō lāgyā, he began; gayō, gayā, he went; rahā, he remained; ō didu nahī, that was not given; hū tāri sēwā kari, I did thy service, etc.

There are only a few instances of a future. Thus, kaohas, I will say; mārūs, I will strike; hāin, I shall be; āpun ānand karō, we shall make merry. The last mentioned form karō is probably simply the first person plural of the present. In āpun khāi pū majā kari, let us eat and drink and make merry, kari seems to correspond to the Khāndēśī future ending in ī.

The verbal noun is formed as in Khāndēśī. Thus, suk^{wā}, to say; karāwā and karwā-nā, to make; aḍ^{chan} paḍyā lāgī, distress began to arise. In poshākh āṅg-ma mēl^{nō}, put a cloth on his body, the form ending in nō seems to be a future participle passive, corresponding to Marāṭhī forms ending in vā.

The conjunctive participle is formed as in Khāndēśī. Thus, wāṭī, having divided; achīn, having been; karīn, having done. Note also aikiyē, having heard, where the suffix ē of the case of the agent has been substituted for n.

The specimen which follows will probably be sufficient to give an idea of the character of the dialect.

RANĀWAṬ.

This dialect is spoken by the Khiste Brāhman̄s of the Burhanpur Tahsil of Nimar. The number of speakers has been estimated for the use of this Survey at 500.

Ranāwaṭ is, in all essential points, identical with the current Khāndēśī of the Burhanpur Tahsil. The following peculiarities should be noted:—

Final vowels in postpositions are often dropped; thus, tyāl and tyā-lē, to him; jamān for jamā-nā, of the property.

N is often cerebral; thus, mā-ṇā, my.

Note also the y in forms such as ghar-myā, in the house; lāgyā and lāgā, he began, etc.

There are no traces of the oblique plural form ending in s. A form ending in āt or hāt seems to be used instead; thus, majūr-hāt-lē, to the servants; lōkē-hāt-nī gardī, a crowd of people; chhōk^rryāt-lē, to the daughters. The suffix of the case of the agent is ē; thus, bāpē, by the father. Note also the postposition warā-mē in śuddhi-warā-mē, on his senses; tyā-ṇī warā-mē, thereupon. The suffix ṇī in tyā-ṇī in the last instance is the usual oblique form of the genitive suffix.

The plural of strong masculine bases ends in ā; thus, ghōḍā, a horse and horses.

With regard to pronouns we may note the plural forms tyā-ṇā, their; tyāt-lē, to them, etc.

The verb substantive is chhau, I am, second and third persons chhē or chha; plural, 1, chhējēchh; 2 and 3, chhētēchh. The past tense is chhā and thā, used for all persons and numbers.

Similarly chh is used in the present tense of finite verbs instead of Khāndēśī s; thus, mārachh and mār^rchha, I, thou, or he, strikes; plural, 1, mār^rjēchh, 2 and 3, mār^rtēchh. In the plural forms the final chh is often, in all such forms, replaced by ch; thus, tyā mār^rtēch, they strike.

The past tense is formed as in Khāndēśī. Note, however, the forms ending in yā; thus, lāgā and lāgyā, began; puchya, it was asked.

'To strike' is given as mār^rwa, and the future of that verb is, singular, 1, mār^rsū; 2, mār^rsī; 3, mārāi; plural, 1, mār^rsū; 2, mār^rsō; 3, mār^rtī.

Note finally the form khuṣī manāwa, let us make merry.

In all essential points, however, the specimen which follows will show that Ranāwaṭ closely agrees with ordinary Khāndēśī.

again alive became; and lost gone was, he has-been-found.'

Bhils are the principal inhabitants of the Surgana State and of the northern part of Nasik, and they are also found in the Dangs State. Their dialect is very closely related to Khāndēśī. It will be sufficient to draw attention to a few points.

There is a tendency to clip final vowels; thus, tyā-n and tyā-na, by him; may mar, I die.

ṽ is dropped before i, ē, and y; thus, istu, fire; īs, twenty; yapār, business.

The inflexion of nouns is, broadly speaking, the same as in Khāndēśī. Note, however, the dative suffix ta. Thus, ābās-nā, of the father; chākaras-ta, to the servants; pāṭil-nē ghar, at the Patil's house. The sense of gender is weak. Thus, we find hai (fem. and n.) dīcas (m.), this day; sampattī wāṭi dinā, property having-divided was-given.

The present tense of the verb substantive is formed as follows:—

Singular, 1. āsa , or śāūsa	Plural, 1. āsāt , sat(as)
3. āsa , sa	3. āsāt , sat(as)

The present tense of finite verbs is formed as in Khāndēśī; thus, māras, plural mār^atas from mār^anā, to strike. We, however, also find forms such as jās, we, or you, go; jāt, they go; bharat, they fill.

The past tense is formed as in Khāndēśī; thus, rahinā, he remained; lāgā, he began; gayōl and gayēl, he had gone, etc. Marāṭhī, or mixed Marāṭhī, forms are lāg^ala, they began; jāy^alā, they were; wan^alā, they came, etc.

The active and the passive constructions are sometimes confounded. Thus, mul sāṅg^anu, the-son it-was-said, the son said. The impersonal passive construction is sometimes used with neuter verbs, as also occurs in Rājasthānī. Thus, tyān gayā, by-him it-was-gone, he went.

The future agrees with Khāndēśī. Thus, from mār^anā to strike:—

Singular, 1. mār^asū	Plural 1. mār^asū(t)
2. mārīs , mār^aśī	2. mār^aśāl , mār^aśāt
3. mārī , mārāi	3. mār^atī , mār^athīn

Other forms will be easily recognized as identical with, or corresponding to, those used in Khāndēśī.

I am indebted to Mr. A. H. A. Simcox, I.C.S., for an excellent specimen of the Bhil dialect of the northern part of Nasik, about Malegaon.

BĀG'LĀNĪ OR NAHARĪ.

This is the dialect of the ancient kingdom of Baglan, comprising the present Taluka of Satana and parts of Malegaon, Kalwan and Pimpalner. The name Naharī is stated to be a corruption of Nyahādī, a name given by the people along the Tapti to those who live along the small mountain rivers in Baglan. Naharī, therefore, probably means 'river-language.'

It has been returned as a separate dialect from the Peint Taluka in Nasik and from the Surgana State. The following are the revised figures :—

Nasik	10,000
TOTAL											.	13,000

In the south of Peint Taluka the dialect gradually merges into Marāṭhī. In the north it becomes more and more like Khāndēśī, and may be considered as a form of that language. I am indebted to Mr. A. H. A. Simcox, I.C.S., for two specimens, both prepared in Baglan. The first is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, only the first few lines of which have been reproduced. The second is a conversation between a villager and a wayfarer.

The Brāhmins of Khandesh are said to be able to understand Bāg'lānī without difficulty, and the dialect does not differ much from Khāndēśī. We may only note forms such as mī sēs, I am; tū sās, thou art; āmi sēs, we are; and the imperative of verbs ending in ā, which add y; thus, dzāy, go; khāy, eat, etc.

BHILI OF KHANDESH.

A large portion of the population of Khandesh has been reported as speaking various dialects of Bhili. Some of them, viz., Pāwri, Māwchi, and Kōṅkaṇi, have already been dealt with in the preceding pages. The Wārlis are said to speak a form of Māwchi. No further details are, however, available, and the estimated number of speakers in Khandesh has, therefore, been added to the figures for Wārli in Thana, which is so largely influenced by Marāṭhi that it has been dealt with in connexion with that language. See Vol. vii, pp. 141 and ff. The same remarks apply to Kāthōḍi.

The Bhils of Khandesh may, according to the District Gazetteer, be arranged in three groups, Plains Bhils, Hill and Forest tribes, and mixed tribes. We are here only concerned with the two former groups.

The Bhils of the plains are found in small numbers in almost all the villages of Central and South Khandesh. They can scarcely be distinguished from the low caste Hindūs among whom they live. Their language seems everywhere to be that of their neighbours.

Specimens have been received from the Pachora and Chalisgaon Talukas, and they are written in a form of speech which is practically identical with Khāndēsi.

The Chalisgaon specimens transliterate the palatals as in Marāṭhi; thus, dzō, who; tsānd, moon. They also evince a tendency towards aspiration; thus, tyā-mha, among them; tyā mārhit, they will strike.

In Pachora we find the Gujarātī particle j used in addition to the common ch which Khāndēsi shares with Marāṭhi; thus, tu-nhā-j, thine-indeed.

The inflexion of nouns is the same as in Khāndēsi, with the same loose conception of gender. The oblique plural of masculine and neuter bases, however, ends in as or ās, and not in ēs; thus, māṇ^sas-lā, to the men; duk^ras-na, by the swine. The suffix of the dative is usually lā, that of the ablative thīn, or, sometimes, sa; thus, pōris-lā, to daughters; khēt-mayī-thīn, from in the field; ānand-sa, with joy.

The oblique form of adjectives and words used as adjectives ends in i; thus, tyā-nī bābā-lā, to his father. There are, however, many instances of inconsistency. Thus, tō māṇus-na, by that man; dzō āṇḍōr-nī, by which son, the son by whom.

With regard to pronouns, we may note āmhu, we; tumh, tumhu, and tumha, you; jō and jī, both used for the neuter of the relative pronoun, etc.

Verbs commonly add an s in the second person singular. Thus sa, I am, he is, but sas, thou art; plural sat. The past tense of the verb substantive is as^tōl and asⁿōl, plural as^talā and asⁿalā.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed in the same way as in the case of the verb substantive. Thus, mī māra, I strike; tū jāś, he goes; tō jāy, he goes; mārat, we, you, and they, strike.

The pluperfect seems to be used as an ordinary past; thus, tū gayās and gayōl, thou wentest; tō gayā and gayōl, he went; tyā gayāt, and gaylā, they went.

The past tense of transitive verbs is often actively construed; thus, may tu-nī sēwā kar^{nā}, I did thy service; tyā mār^{nāt}, they struck. On the other hand we find tyā-nī sāṅg^{wā} lāgā, him-by to-say it-was-began, he began to say.

In Chalisgaon s is often added instead of nī or san in the conjunctive participle. Thus, uḥīs, having arisen; bōlāis, having called.¹

In all essential points, however, the so-called Bhilōdī closely agrees with Khândēśī.

The specimen which follows has been received from the Pachora Taluka. It is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. A specimen received from Chalisgaon will be found below on pp. 155 and ff.

The hill and forest tribes of Bhils are chiefly found in the Satpuras. Specimens have only been received in Pāwri, Māwchī, Dēhawālī, and Kōṭalī. The two former dialects have already been dealt with, and specimens of Dēhawālī and Kōṭalī will be given below. Wārli and Kāthōḍī have been described as dialects of Marāṭhī. See Vol. vii, pp. 130 and ff.

The remaining Satpura tribes which were returned for the use of this Survey are as follows :—

Name of Dialect.	Number of Speakers.
Mathawāḍl	20,000
Nāli	10,000
Kāyali	25,000
TOTAL .	55,000

No specimens have been forwarded in any of those dialects, and later information from the district is to the effect that they do not any longer exist. It is therefore probable that the various names of the hill dialects are only local denominations of slightly varying forms of Khāndēśī. Such a conclusion is made probable by the fact that Kōṭalī is not very different from Khāndēśī. All the tribes in question have, therefore, been put down simply as Bhils in the figures given above on p. 5.

DEHAWĀLĪ.

The plains below the Satpura range in Taloda, Nandurbar, and Mewas, of the district of Khandesh is locally called the dēh, i.e., dēs, country. The dialect of the Dēhawāls, the inhabitants of the dēh, is known as Dēhawālī. The number of speakers has been estimated at 45,000.

Dēhawālī is closely related to other Bhīl dialects such as Māwchī, Rānī, etc.

Two excellent specimens have been prepared by Mr. G. B. Brahme and further annotated by Mr. A. H. A. Simcox, I.C.S. The first is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second is a popular tale which was obtained from Bapu Gumba Padavi, the Rāja of Singapur and other states in the Taloda taluka.

Pronunciation.—Dēhawālī is characterized by the drawling pronunciation of final vowels and the free use of the Anunāsika. Compare hāā, yes; māhūū, a man; pōwōhō, a brother; māā, māā, and māā, my; lāgyā and lāgyā, they began; jātō-hō and jātō-hō, he goes, etc.

The short a is apparently always distinctly pronounced, or, when final, replaced by ē or ō; thus, dēwa, dēvē, and dēwō, God.

An initial h is commonly dropped, and aspirated soft consonants are replaced by the corresponding unaspirated hard ones. Thus, āthē, hand; āhñē, to laugh; kālā, Marāṭhī ghālā, put; pūtē, devil; pukhē, with hunger, etc.

S becomes h, and an r between vowels is often dropped. Thus, kēhē, hair; hunō, dog; kōō, Marāṭhī ghar, house; kii, having done; chhōō, son; mōō, die, etc.

The cerebral ḷ is not regularly used. Thus, mālā and mālā, a floor; ḍōā, an eye. Compare Khāndēśī.

Nouns.—Strong masculine bases are formed as in Gujarātī. Thus, bāhakō, a father; bāhakā, fathers. Feminine nouns ending in ī form their plural in ā; thus pōyarī, daughter; pōyaryā, daughters.

There is apparently no neuter gender. Forms such as pōyarō, child; ī, this thing, can be either masculine or feminine.

The case of the agent is identical with the oblique base, and the genitive is formed by doubling the final vowel. Thus, bāhakā or bāhakā, by the father; bāhakāā, of the father; pōyarī, of the daughter; dēwōō, of the God.

The suffix of the dative is nē or lē; that of the ablative dēkhūū; and the locative is formed by adding mē or ē; thus, bāhakā-nē and bāhakā-lē, to the father; bāhakā-dēkhūū, from the father; kōō-mē, in the house.

Pronouns.—The personal pronouns are :—

āī , I	tū , thou	tō , he
māyū , by me	tuyū , by thee	tiyā , by him
mā-nē , to me	tu-le , to thee	tiyā-lē , to him
māā , my	tōō , thy	tiyāā , his
āmū , we	tumū , you	tē , they
āmāā , our	tumōō , your	tiyāā , their

Other pronouns are ō, this; ī, this thing; kēḍō, fem. kēḍī, who? kāy, what? ī, this thing, is perhaps originally feminine.

Verbs.—The verb substantive is āhī; past āthō, plural āthā.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed from the present participle by adding hō, plural hā; thus, jātō-hō, I go, thou goest, he goes; plural, jātā-hā. In the singular, however, the old present is in frequent use. Thus, ṭhōkū or ṭhōkū-hū, I strike; ṭhōkō-hō, thou strikest; āwō, if thou come; ṭhōkē-hē, he strikes; pōḍē, if it falls. The instances show that the old present is used as a conjunctive present, while an ordinary present is effected by adding hū, second person hō, third hē.

The suffix of the past tense is yō, fem. ī; thus, giyō, he went; kālī, she was put. Other forms are khāhalē, they ate; ālō-hō, I have come.

The future tense of ṭhōkualō, to strike, is given as follows:—

Singular.	1. ṭhōkēhē	Plural.	1. ṭhōkūhū
	2. ṭhōkōhō		2. ṭhōkāhā
	3. ṭhōkī		3. ṭhōkī

Other forms will be easily understood from the specimens which follow, and it is not necessary to go into detail.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

In a village there lived a man called Gimbō. His wife's name was Jānū. Gimbō was poor and somewhat dull. But when he had got some work to do, he did not leave off till he had finished it.

One winter husband and wife were occupied in cutting the shrubs¹ and cleaning the four boundaries of their land. In order to get seed-corn, they worked with a gentleman and saved their wages till they got enough to buy a big pot full of rice.

Towards the rains in the month of Jēshṭh, they burnt the shrubs and cleared the ground. When the black clouds began to rain, the husband and wife went to the field to sow the rice. - Then cucumbers were sown. During the raining of the black clouds all things were sprouting. The grasses and shrubs in the woods were sprouting, and the forest began to get a deep green hue.

When the rice began to appear, Gimbō built a high platform in the field and said to Jānū, 'henceforward I shall live on the platform in the field and practise austerities. Therefore you must not come into the field. When you bring some provisions for me, then you should only proceed so far as the boundary and put it there. Then you should beat on a dry stick and go away. I shall then go to the boundary and fetch the provisions. When the rice ripens, I shall thresh it and come home. In the meantime, if there is some urgent business, then go to the boundary and shout loudly, and I shall answer.' Having said so Gimbō began to live on the platform in the field.

On the boundary of that field there was a sanctuary to a boundary god.² He went there day and night, cleaned the place, worshipped the god, and prayed. When he was going to return he used to say, 'O boundary god, I have sown a potful of rice. If I can get a khāṇḍī³ of rice out of it, well and good. If not, then I shall cut thy nose with this knife.' And so saying he placed a knife which he held in his hand on the nose of the god's image. Thus he did day and night.

In this way the time went on, and the rice was weeded and ripened. When the time came for cutting it, then he always went to the sanctuary, day and night, worshipped, and at the time of returning he said, 'O god, till to-day I have been serving thee day and night. And indeed, if I get a khāṇḍī out of my potful of seed, it is all right. If not, then I shall not leave thee without cutting thy nose.' So saying he went to work on the field.

The god began to think, 'this man must be mad, that he asks a khāṇḍī rice out of a pot of seed. And he threatens me and says, "if there comes a khāṇḍī rice out of my pot of seed, then it is well. If not, then I shall cut thy nose," and he places his knife on my nose and makes a mark on it. He is practising austerities and serving me. I cannot, therefore, do him any harm. But it is meet that I should frighten him. And then he will give up that bad habit.'

Then in the dead of night the god assumed a bear's appearance and went to where Gimbō was sleeping on the platform in the field and began to roar. Then Gimbō said, 'I do not know anything about a bear. Thou art the god and hast come to frighten me, but I am not afraid. Till now I asked for a khāṇḍī out of my pot, but now I must have two.'

¹ Chāmōṣā corresponds to dāḍā in the Konkan. It means the ground burnt in preparation of the seed, but also the loppings and grass strewn over the ground to be burnt, and the corn grown on such ground.

³ A khāṇḍī is equal to twenty maunds.

The god went on roaring till cock's crow, and then went off. On the following day he, in the dead of night, assumed the form of a tiger, went to the platform, and began to roar. Gimbō then said, 'thou hast come in the form of a tiger, but I have found thee out and am not afraid. Thou art the god. Yesterday I demanded two khāṇḍīs out of my potful, but now I will not leave off till I get four.'

The god again kept on roaring until cock's crow, and then went away.

The god now began to reflect, 'I am trying to frighten him, and he is not afraid, but goes on asking the double amount. The more I frighten him, the more he will increase his demands, and he will not run away.' Therefore he remained silent, and the crops got ripe. Gimbō cut the rice and began threshing.

One day the procession of king Pānaṭhō¹ passed by there. The boundary god went to him and said, 'a man has tilled a ground close to my abode, and he has sown a potful of rice there. In order to watch the rice he has built a platform in the field, and he stays there. Day and night he practises austerities and comes and worships me. When he goes away, he says, 'I have sown a potful. If I get a khāṇḍī out of it, well and good. If not, I shall cut thy nose. And he applies his knife to the nose of my image. I have tried to frighten him once or twice, but he is not to be brought out of his mind, and goes on increasing his demands.'

King Pānaṭhō said to the god, 'if he is so strong in his austerities and so obstinate we must yield to him.' And both gods went to where Gimbō was threshing.

When Gimbō saw king Pānaṭhō, he ran and fell to his feet. Then the gods entered the threshing floor and sat down. Gimbō first worshipped king Pānaṭhō, and then the boundary god, and remained standing folding his hands. King Pānaṭhō said, 'We will give you fame and prosperity, and your progeny shall increase.' And so saying the gods departed.

Gimbō then threshed and winnowed the rice, and four khāṇḍīs came out. Again he worshipped at the abode of the boundary god, took the rice and all implements with him to his house, and settled down.

From that day his estate, his crops, and his money went on increasing, he got many children, and lived in happiness.

KOTALI.

This is the dialect of the Kōṭals, a wild Bhil tribe in the Satpuras, in the northern part of Khandesh. They collect gum and wax in the forests and sell it in the plains. Their number has been estimated at 40,000.

So far as we can judge from the specimens received from Khandesh, Kōṭali is almost identical with Khāndēśī.

Two specimens, a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son and a story, have been printed below, and they will not present any serious difficulty to the student.

It will be sufficient to draw attention to a few details in which Kōṭali differs from Khāndēśī.

Ya is substituted for ē in yak, one.

The cerebral l is sometimes replaced by l̥; thus, pal, run.

The distinction of gender is apparently still less consistent than is the case in Khāndēśī. Thus we find tu-nī nauk'rī ma-na kar'nā, thy service (fem.) me-by was-done (masc.).

The oblique plural of masculine bases ends in ās or as, and not in ēs; thus, pōrās-maīn, from among the sons; chōrās-lā, to the thieves. The suffix of the ablative is thīn or pain; thus, Talōdyā-thīn, from Taloda; bā-pain, from a father.

Strong adjectives, including the genitive, have an oblique form ending in ī; thus, mānus-nī ghar, in a man's house. The use of this form is, however, rather inconsistent. Thus we find tī pōryā, that son, in the nominative; but tō dhanī-na, by that rich man, in the case of the agent.

The pronouns are mainly the same as in Khāndēśī. Note, however, mi-na, by me; tu-na, by thee; āmu, we; tumu, you; hai, this (all genders), etc.

The verb substantive forms its present as follows, singular sa, plural sat. The second person singular has also the form sas. The past tense is as'nōl, plural as'nalā.

The present tense of finite verbs is formed as in Khāndēśī in the singular. Thus, māras, I strike, thou strikest, he strikes. The plural ends in at; thus, mārat, they strike. In the first person plural we find forms such as mār'jē, we strike; jāut, we go. Forms such as mī mara, I die; mī jāy, I go; tō jāy, he goes; but tū jās, thou goest, correspond to the present singular of the verb substantive.

In the past tense we find forms such as gayā and gayōl, went, apparently used without any difference of meaning. In tu-na mēṇḍh'rū dinās, thou gavest a kid, the suffix s of the second person singular is used as in Marāṭhī. Dinās might, however, also be a wrong transliteration instead of dinā sa.

In the future we may note the form tū mār'sis, thou wilt strike. In other respects Kōṭali seems to agree with Khāndēśī.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A Musalman sepoy once travelled from Taloda to Nandurbar. While he was still walking on the road the sun set, and he found himself alone. After some time he saw four thieves standing before him. They seized him there and then and beat him soundly, and took all his clothes from him. Then one of the thieves drew his sword, another showed him a knife, and they said to him, 'Ho, sepoy, dance before us. If not, we will kill you.' Out of fear the sepoy then began to dance. At last he fell on his knees and obtained his freedom, whereafter he returned to Taloda. The police-officer of Taloda learned of the affair and had the thieves seized and reported the matter to the Magistrate. He tried the thieves and sentenced them to six months' imprisonment.

The Bhil dialects just dealt with are little more than ordinary Khāndēśī. Before dealing with that form of speech we will, however, have to mention some Bhil dialects of a slightly different kind.

The Bhili of Nimar is now almost a Marāṭhī dialect. It differs from other Bhil dialects described in the preceding pages as links between Gujarātī-Bhili and the broken Marāṭhī dialects of Thana, in having, to a much greater extent, assumed the inner form of Marāṭhī, e.g., in using the Marāṭhī oblique form. On the other hand, it is easy to see that the base of the dialect is some form of Gujarātī Bhili.

The Bhili dialects spoken in Berar are probably of the same kind as Panchālī, dealt with above (pp. 138 and ff.). Some of the Bhils of Basim, however, speak a form of Gōṇḍī. Specimens will be given in connexion with that form of speech.

Lastly, there are four related dialects spoken outside the proper Bhil country, viz., Bāori, Habūrā, Pār 'dhī and Siyālgiri. They have been somewhat influenced by other dialects. In most respects, however, they are of the same kind as the Bhili of Mahikantha and neighbourhood.

The dialect of the Bhils of Nimar is a mixed form of speech. The base is some dialect related to the western forms of Bhili. Compare forms such as khēt-bhitar, in the fields; chalyōl, gone; karīna, having done. It has, however, been so largely mixed with the Marāṭhī spoken in the Central Provinces that it might with equal justice be regarded as a Marāṭhī dialect. Compare forms such as ād'myā-la, to a man; wāṣā, a share; gēlā, he went; hōlā, he became; kahīn, I will tell, etc.

It will be quite sufficient to give the first lines of the Parable of the Prodigal Son as an illustration of this mixed form of speech.

BĀORĪ.

This is the dialect of the Bāwarias, a hunting and criminal tribe of the Panjab and the Muzaffarnagar District of the United Provinces. In Rajputana Bāorī has been returned as the language of 400 Moghias in Kishangarh. The Moghias are a similar tribe; compare Sir Henry M. Elliot, Memoirs on the History, Folk-Lore and Distribution of the Races of the North-Western Provinces of India. Edited by John Beames, Vol. i, London, 1869, p. 9.

The fullest account of the Bāwarias will be found in Mr. W. Crooke's, The Tribes and Castes of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, Vol. i, Calcutta, 1886, pp. 228 ff.

The number of speakers has been estimated for the use of this Survey as follows:—

PANJAB AND FEUDATORIES—
Hissar	931
Kapurthala	80
Nabha	30
Faridkot	3,000
Ferozpur	33,000
Lahore	460
UNITED PROVINCES—
Muzaffarnagar	102
RAJPUTANA—
Kishangarh	400

The estimates from Ferozpur and probably also from Faridkot are, however, too high. At the last Census (1901) only 4,952 speakers of Bāorī were counted in the Panjab and its feudatories. The Bāwarias are a vagrant tribe, and it is, therefore, difficult to form an accurate estimate of their number. In the Panjab they sometimes call their language Thalli, and they are there said to have come from the Thal or Bikaner desert.

This is, however, in no way borne out by their language, which is certainly a form of the Gujarāṭī Bhilī. Several specimens of it have been received, and they all have the same basis. The specimens received from Lahore are the purest, although that district is the one which is farthest from the Bhil country. In the specimens received from the other districts of the Panjab, the language is in its essence the same, but is more or less mixed with the Panjābī spoken by the surrounding population.

The Bāwariās have no written character of their own, and some of the specimens have been written in the Persian, some in the Gurmukhī, and some in the Dēva-nāgarī character. I hence only record them here in the Roman character, as the most convenient one.

The following two specimens come from Lahore and have been very carefully prepared. After being faired out, they were again checked on the spot by Mr. Jowala Sahai Misr, B.A., Extra Assistant Commissioner, and give an excellent idea of the dialect. It will be seen that, save in a few matters of spelling, it does not differ from Gujarātī Bhili. We may note the following (which are only a few out of many) characteristics of the dialect.

The letter s regularly becomes kh, as in khāt, for sāt, seven; vīkh, for vīs, twenty; khēkh for khēs or kēs, hair; manukhō, a man. Sometimes the kh is weakened to h (as in Northern Gujarātī), as in hāb'liō, he was heard; hāpāi, for sipāhī, a peon; harkār, the Government. Before i or ē, the s is sometimes preserved, as in man'sī, a woman; sē, why? but khō, for śū, what? Ch and chh become s as in sō for chhō, I am; passē for pachchē, afterwards. There is a tendency to prefer dentals to cerebrals as in vittī or vīti, for vīti, a ring. There is no cerebral ḷ.

Strong masculine nouns with a bases end in ō, not ā, with an oblique singular in ā not ē, as in manukhō, a man; oblique singular manukhā. When the noun is neuter the ō is usually nasalized as in khōnō, gold; puchhiō, it was asked; kihō, it was said. Gender is, however, carelessly observed. The plural of neuter nouns ends in ā, as in rupaiā, rupees; lug'rā, robes; khākh'rā, shoes.

The postposition of the genitive is nō or nau (feminine nī, oblique masculine nā). That of the dative is nū, nē, nai or nā. Nū is evidently borrowed from the surrounding Panjābī. The dative suffix is often weakened to a mere n, as in tihōn, to them; chār'wā-n, to graze. The suffix of the ablative is thō, which agrees in gender and case with the governing noun, as in tihō-māi-thē nanōrē, by the younger from among them. Note that, as in the last example, the agent case ends in ē. So also the locative, as in gharē, in a house.

The pronouns are—

1st person, hū, I; mī, by me; mannē, to me; mharō or mārō, my; hamē, we, by us; hamārō, our.

2nd person, taū or tū, thou; tī or tēn, by thee; tāh'rō or tārō, thy; tamē, tammē or tamhē, you, by you; tauhe, you (accusative plural); tamāh'rō, your.

There are several demonstrative pronouns. Thus, yōh, he; inhō, ih'nō, his. Tiō, tiōh, or tyōh, he, that; tinnō, tīnō, his; tinnē, tinhē, tīnē, to him, by him, in that; tē, by him; tihā, that (oblique adjective); tē, tēhē, they, by them; tēhō, tihō (oblique plural); tēhōnō, tihōnō, their; tihōn, to them. Pēllō (=Gujarātī pēlō), he, that; oblique pēllā, agent pēllē.

Hīō, hīōh, or hyōh is 'this'; oblique singular hyā or hā.

Other forms are jō, who; jīnō, of whom; kaun, who? kīnō, whose? kaun kan-thō, from near whom? khō, what? kīnē, by anyone; kihē waqtē, at any time; kāis, anything.

Verbs are conjugated just as in Gujarātī Bhili. The verb substantive is sō (for chhō), I am; uttō, was. When employed as an auxiliary uttō becomes tō, as in giō-tō, had gone. The present definite is formed by conjugating the simple present (not the present participle) with the verb substantive. Thus, mārō-sō, I am beating. The conjunctive participle ends in n, as in vēchīn, having sold, or, more usually, the n is dropped as in karī, having done. The past participle ends in iō, as in māriō, struck. Irregular are kihō, said; diddō, given; liddō, taken.

The negative verb has kō, at all, prefixed as in Rājasthānī. Thus, kō-diddō-nahī, was not given at all. The Rājasthānī pleonastic suffix s (sometimes written kh) is very common. Thus, khārā-s, all; kadē-kh, ever.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

There was an animal under that bush.

There is no canal in the district.

An old woman was telling the truth.

I took my dinner.

My daughter is 12 years old.

I heard his words.

There are two brothers of mine.

Yesterday I went to Chunian, where the Tahsildār seized me. I had gone to sell two maunds of grain, and on my way back, the tahsīl peon met me at my house, and told me to attend the tahsīl as the Tahsildār wanted me soon. I did not take my bread and went straight to Chunian. When I reached Chunian and presented myself before the Tahsildār, he asked me, 'do you know the Bāori dialect?' I replied, 'yes, I will speak my own language.' The Tahsildār told me 'will you sing a song in your own language? I have received an order from Government. Speak in your own language. You will be able to go to-day or to-morrow after I have done with you. The Government will be pleased, and will give you great peace.'

It is unnecessary to give further specimens of the Bāori spoken in the Punjab. All those received closely resemble the foregoing ones, only being more or less mixed with Panjābi idioms. As Lahore is the most western locality from which Bāori is reported, it will be sufficient to give one more specimen, a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son from the most eastern, the district of Muzaffarnagar, in the United Provinces. As Muzaffarnagar is in the Upper Dōāb, we shall not be surprised to find examples of the idiom of the vernacular Hindōstānī used in the district.¹ Such is the frequent doubling of a medial consonant, with the consequent shortening of the preceding vowel, as in bābbā, a father; hottō, he was; minn-hē, to me; khettar, a field. In bābbā, as in the local vernacular Hindōstānī, the first ā, though written long, is pronounced short like the ā in the German word 'mann.' Other departures, also probably due to the influence of the local vernacular, are forms like minn-hē, for mannē, to me; tinn-hō for tikhō, to them; maī, I, by me; hottō or huttō, for uttō, was.

In other respects, after allowance has been made for variations of spelling, the dialect is practically the same as that of Lahore.

HABŪRĀ.

The Habūrā are a vagrant thieving tribe found chiefly in the Central Ganges-Jumna Doab.

In the Census of 1891 their number was reported to be as follows :—

Aligarh	868
Mathura	731
Farrukhabad	46
Mainpuri	232
Etawah	189
Etah	224
Moradabad	26
Shahjahanpur	113
Pilibhit	42
Sitapur	112
TOTAL	2,596

They have a language of their own, which, however, was reported for the purposes of this Survey only from Aligarh, as spoken by 950 people. As they wander about a great deal, the difference between 950 and 868, the number given in the Census of 1891, needs no explanation.

The fullest account of the tribe will be found on pages 473 and ff. of Vol. II of Mr. Crooke's The Tribes and Castes of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. Their origin is obscure. Mr. Crooke says that they have a regular Thieves' Latin of their own, but the list of words which he gives are nearly all ordinary Bhili.

I give, as a specimen, a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son received from Aligarh. It entirely bears out the impression conveyed by Mr. Crooke's list. The language is simply ordinary Gujarātī Bhilī, and closely resembles Bāorī.

It has also the peculiar habit of doubling consonants which is present in the Upper Gangetic Doab, and to which reference has been made more than once. Thus bābbō, a father; huttō, or hittō, was; khētadḍō, for khēt'rō, a field; diddhō, given; and so on. Before these doubled consonants long vowels (except ā) are shortened, and ā is pronounced like the a in the German 'mann.' As in Gujarātī Bhilī, the letter s is regularly pronounced ṣh like the ch in 'loch.' The neuter gender ends in ō, as in kahyō, it was said. Thārō, your, becomes tārō. There are no other peculiarities which deserve special notice.

PĀR'DHĪ OR ṬĀKAṆKĀRĪ.

The Pār'dhīs are a wandering tribe of fowlers in Chanda and Berar. They are mostly snarers and are therefore also called Phāsa Pār'dhīs. Their dialect has been returned from the following districts :—

Where spoken.	Number of speakers.
Chanda	25
Amraoti	500
Akola	1,635
Ellichpur	1,000
Buldana	250
Wun	2,000
TOTAL .	5,410

The Ṭākankārīs are a similar tribe of vagrant mill-grinders. They have been returned as speaking a separate dialect from Amraoti, Akola, Ellichpur, and Buldana. The following are the revised figures :—

Amraoti	200
Akola	2,323
Ellichpur	500
TOTAL .	3,238

Specimens have been received in both dialects from Akola. Another specimen, which has been forwarded from Melkapur in Buldana, professes to illustrate both dialects. And the specimens clearly show that this Pār'dhī and Ṭākankārī are in reality identical. By adding the figures just given we therefore arrive at the following total for the dialect :—

Pār'dhī	5,410
Ṭākankārī	3,238
TOTAL .	8,648

The dialect under consideration is a form of Gujarāti-Bhili. In some points it agrees with Khândēśī, and there is also a slight admixture of Marāṭhī. This latter element is, however, insignificant, and is clearly a loan.

The characteristic features of the dialect will be seen from the specimens printed below, and I shall here only draw attention to a few points.

An s is very commonly replaced by kh, i.e. probably kḥ; thus, paikhō, money; kḥāmlina, having heard, Gujarāti sābhaḥinē, and so on. The same substitution of kh for s also occurs in Siyālgiri. S is, however, often retained; thus, sū, what; dēs and dēs, country, etc. The real sound is probably that of ch in German 'ach,' and I have therefore written kḥ. Compare the corresponding ḥ in the Bhili of Edar and neighbourhood.

Ch is sometimes interchangeable with s; thus, jāyach and jās, thou goest. It is, accordingly, possible that ch has the sound of s as in other Bhil dialects.

V is dropped before palatal vowels; thus, ikh, twenty; iṭi, ring.

Nouns.—There is a tendency to replace the neuter by the masculine gender; thus, āp-nō pēt, his own belly. On the whole, however, the genders are correctly distinguished.

The nominative is sometimes used instead of the case of the agent; thus, bāwō didu, the father gave (lit. it was given). The suffixes of the case of the agent are ē, nē, and na; thus, ād^mmī-yē, by the man; dhanī-nē, by the rich man; tī-na, by him. Occasionally we also find nō; thus, tī-nō, by him.

The suffixes of the dative and the locative are n and na, ma and mō, respectively; thus, ād^mmī-n, to a man; bāwā-na, to the father; muluk-ma, in the country; galā-mō, on the neck.

In most other respects the inflexion of nouns agrees with Gujarātī. Thus, ghōḍō, a horse; ghōḍā, horses. Occasionally, however, we find Marāṭhī forms such as chhiyā, instead of the common chhiyō, a son.

'I' is hū; in Buldana, however, mi as in Marāṭhī. Note the form sū, what? The oblique form tyā, that, is Marāṭhī.

Verbs.—The usual form of the present tense of the verb substantive is chha in all persons and numbers. Other forms, however, also occur. Thus, chhū, I am; chhē thou art, he is, they are, etc. Compare Gujarātī.

The present tense of finite verbs has many various forms. The regular ones of mār^wwū, to strike, are,—

Sing. 1. mārūs .	Plur. 1. māris .
2. māras .	2. mārōs .
3. māras .	3. māras .

Compare Khāndēśī and other Bhil dialects. Ch is often substituted for s; thus, mārōch, you strike. See above.

The past tense is usually regular. Thus, gēyō and gayō, he went; gayā, they went. The form ending in ā is, however, also used in the singular; thus, rhā, he lived. Compare Nouns, above. On the other hand, we also find forms such as āyō, they came, and there seems to be a tendency to obliterate the difference between the two numbers. S is sometimes also added in the past tense; thus, rahyās, they lived.

The neuter form of the past tense sometimes ends in i instead of in yu; thus, ma-na pāp karī, by-me sin was done.

The conjunctive participle ends in i or ina (in); thus, karī and karīna (karin), having done. Marāṭhī forms such as jāun, having gone, also occur.

The verbal noun ends in wā and i; thus, chārāwā-n, in order to tend; ad^cchan paḍī lāgī, distress began to come.

Other forms will be easily recognizable from the specimens.

The first of the specimens which follow is the beginning of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which has been received from Melkapur in Buldana. It professes to illustrate both the dialects in question. The second is the deposition of a witness in Pār'dhī, received from Akola. The third is a version of the Parable in Tākaṅkāri, received from Akola. It will be seen that it is written in the same dialect as the two preceding specimens.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

On a Friday night, about a fortnight ago, I, my wife, and two children were sleeping. About midnight my wife awakened me and said 'there is some noise in the house, and I heard foot-steps. Therefore arise.' I got up and looked towards the wall where I saw a hole. Then I understood that some one had broken into the house. There was no lamp burning, but there was a match box under the carpet. I quickly seized it and lighted a match. Then the accused went towards the hole in the wall. When I saw him, I seized his hand and said, 'now, thief, where are you going?' Thereupon we began to wrestle and I made great noise, so that my neighbours Sitārām and Viṭhōbā came. In the meantime my wife lighted the lamp and opened the door so that they could come in. Then I felt very strong (and overcame him). We found five pieces of cloth on him. They were worth five rupees and belonged to me.

I do not know the village or the name of the accused, because he is not of our village. I had no lamp burning therefore I lighted a match. Then I saw the accused near the hole. Therefore I could not light the lamp. The hole in the wall was large enough for a man to get through it with difficulty. The bar with which the hole in the wall was made has been produced in the Court. I found it in the bath-room.

SIYĀLGIRĪ.

The Siyālgirs are a criminal nomadic tribe, numbering about 120 souls, in the Dantan Thana of the Bengal District of Midnapore, where they are found in the following villages :—

Nimpur, Gomunda,

Saipur.

Lalmohanpatna,
Dhukurda,

A few Siyālgirs are also found in Suga and Simla in District Balasore.

The tribe seems to have immigrated into its present habitat some 150 years ago, and their language shows that they have come from Western India. It is, therefore, probable that they entered Bengal as camp-followers to the Bhonslas, who invaded Bengal in the middle of the eighteenth century.

Their features do not give any clue as to their origin. They now look like ordinary Bengali peasants.

Most of the preceding remarks have been taken from the following,—

AUTHORITY—

GEIERSON, GEORGE A.—Note on a Dialect of Gujarātī discovered in the District of Midnapur. Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. lxvii, Part i, 1898, pp. 185 and ff.

Siyālgirī is derived from a dialect closely related to Gujarātī-Bhīlī, and the tribe has probably originally come from the border districts between Central India, Rajputana, and the Bombay Presidency, the stronghold of the Bhīl tribes. On their way towards the east they have come into contact with various tribes, and the results can be traced in their speech, which now presents a mixed appearance though the original base is easily recognizable.

The only source of our knowledge of Siyālgirī is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which has been forwarded by Babu Krishna Kisor Acharji, Secretary to the Midnapore District Board. See the paper quoted as Authority above.

The materials are not sufficient to solve all the problems connected with the dialect. There cannot, however, be any doubt with regard to its general character. The ensuing remarks are entirely based on the specimen.

Pronunciation.—In many Bhīl dialects an s is regularly replaced by a sound which is something between s and h, somewhat like the ch in German 'ach'. In Pār'dhī kh is used instead of this h; thus, paikhō, money; ikh, twenty, etc. Similarly kh is usually substituted for s in Siyālgirī. Thus, khāb for sab, all; dēkh for dēs, country; khāmlōyā-n, Gujarātī sābhal'wū, to hear (compare hām'linē, having heard, in the Bhīl dialects of Jhabua and Kotra); barakh, Gujarātī varas, a year; khāk-hāun having become awakened (compare hamki, thought, in the Bhīl dialect of Ratlam).

We have no information as to the pronunciation of this kh. It is, however, probable that it is pronounced in the same way as in other Bhīl dialects. For we occasionally find h and even g used instead; thus, kahāin, a harlot; rig, anger. I have therefore substituted the sign kh for the kh of the original.

The ksh in hīksha, share, is probably due to the influence of angśa, share, in the Bengali text from which the translation was originally prepared.

A cerebral ḍ between vowels is pronounced as an r, as is also the case in other Bhil dialects; thus, thōṛā, few.

L is sometimes substituted for n; thus, lāchu, dancing; and perhaps also lāsin, running. The same change is common in many Bhil dialects, but may also be due to the influence of eastern vernaculars.

ṽ is sometimes dropped before i and ē, as is usually the case in many Bhil dialects and in the Marāṭhī of Berar and the Central Provinces. Thus, ēglasta, Gujarātī vēg'ḷū, distant; īḷi, Gujarātī vīḷi, ring. In āt, word, o has been dropped before ā. In other cases o becomes b as in eastern vernaculars; thus, barakh, year; jibat, living; sēbā, service.

Nouns.—The various genders are constantly confounded. Thus, sō khab kharach-patra kidhi, that all expended was made; tāri āt parhikōlā, thy word was transgressed.

The plural seems to have the same form as the singular. Thus, dikrā, a son, and sons.

With regard to cases, the case of the agent is never used. The subject of transitive verbs is put in the nominative case even when the verb is a passive form. Thus, bāb kahū, the-father (-by) it was said.

The nominative singular of strong masculine bases ends in ā as in Marāṭhī and eastern vernaculars; thus, dikrā, a son. Traces of the Gujarātī termination ō are, however, found in the adjectives; thus, mōḷō dikrā, the big (i.e. elder) son.

The usual case suffixes are as follows:—

Dative, nē, n; kō.

Ablative, sē.

Genitive, nā, n.

Locative, mē, mī, mō.

Thus, mānkhā-n, to a man; bābā-nē, to the father; ghar-mī-kō, to-in-the house, into the house; barakh-sē, years-from; ēk marad-nā baya dikrā thēi, one man of two sons were; māra bābā-n kēḷā jhānā darmō-pāun chākēr, how many hired servants of my father's; gāmṛā-mī, in the village; undēl-mē, on the neck; bil-mō, in the field. Old locatives are dēkhēhē, in the country; bilē, in the fields.

It will be seen that an oblique base ending in ā seems to occur in some of these forms. Compare bāb, the father; bābā-nē, to the father.

Most of the suffixes just mentioned occur in other Bhil dialects. The locative suffix mō and the dative suffix kō are perhaps borrowed from Rājasthānī or some eastern dialect. Similar forms, however, also occur in the speech of other Bhil tribes.

Adjectives.—There is no fixed rule for the inflexion of adjectives. Thus, āp-nu bābā-nē, to his father; āp-nā chākēr-nē, to his servant; āp-nā pēḷ, his belly.

Pronouns.—‘I’ is mu. This form also occurs in some Bhil dialects. ‘My’ is māra. The suffix of the dative of pronouns is hē; thus, minhē or manhē, to me. The dative suffix hē is common in some Bhil dialects. It corresponds to a genitive suffix hō as nē corresponds to the genitive ending in nō. The genitive suffix hō occurs in forms such as tūhu āgal, before thee; inhā hāthē, on his hand, etc.

To the genitive māra, my, corresponds a dative māra, to me. It will be seen that the various dative suffixes correspond to genitives formed by adding the same suffix with another termination. The three pairs of suffixes also occur in other Bhil dialects.

The demonstrative pronouns seem to be derived from various sources. Thus, we find ā, this; ēhi, this; tinha, and inha, he; hiyē, he; sō, that; tō, that; tē-krā his;

tār bad, that after, etc. The forms tinha and inha are perhaps originally the case of the agent.

'What ?' is khũ, corresponding to hũ in Gujarātī-Bhili.

Verbs.—There is apparently no difference between the singular and the plural. Thus, rahin means 'he was' and 'they were.'

Of the verb substantive the following forms occur, raha, thou art ; thā, it is ; hutā, he was ; thēi, they were.

The conjunctive present is used both as a present and as a past ; thus, maru, I die ; kahē, he said ; rahē, he lived ; jāi kō-ni, he would not go. All these forms are Gujarātī-Bhili. The same is the case with the ordinary past ; thus, āvya, he came ; dikrā kahā, the-son(-by) it-was said ; hīksha didhu, the share was given ; giya, he went ; lāgā, they went ; jō tār khābja khādu, who ate thy property, etc.

The future is formed as in Gujarātī-Bhili ; thus, kahis, I shall say.

Eastern forms are perhaps khāin, they ate ; rahin, he lived. It is, however, possible that the final n in such forms corresponds to the n in the past tense of Khāndēśī and some Bhil dialects. Compare lāgin, he began, they began, etc., in the Naikāḍī dialect of Surat.

The conjunctive participle ends in i or in, u or un ; thus, kari, having done ; lēin, having taken ; jāu, having gone ; khāun, having eaten. The form kar-kē, having done, is borrowed from Hindi.

The negative particle is kō-ni, not. The same form occurs in some Rājasthānī and Bhil dialects.

The inflexion of Siyālgirī is, as the preceding remarks will have shown, mainly the same as in Gujarātī-Bhili. The same is the case with the vocabulary. I am not, however, able to explain all the words occurring in the specimen. Compare āgā, father (probably the Turkī āghā, master, borrowed through Hindustānī) ; badi-thēi, against ; ba-bhain, thereupon ; ēlā-tō, then (probably the ablative of the base contained in Māw'chī ēlō, that) ; chhēya (perhaps a corruption of the Bengali chēyē) in darkār ghanu chhēya khādu, more food than necessary ; dayā-bahī, pitying (perhaps, compassion having flowed) ; lāsin, having run ; uṇḍēl, neck, etc.

For further particulars the student is referred to the specimen which follows :—

KHĀNDEŚĪ AND ITS SUB-DIALECTS.

Under this heading are included Khāndēśī proper, and the sub-dialects of that form of speech entitled Dāngī and Raṅgārī. These are all dealt with in detail in the following pages. The total number of speakers is as follows :—

Khāndēśī proper	1,217,736
Dāngī	31,700
Raṅgārī	3,630
TOTAL	1,253,066

KHĀNDEŚĪ, AHĪRĀNĪ OR DHĒḌ GUJARĪ.

The district of Khandesh is surrounded by territories belonging to three distinct languages. Gujarātī is spoken towards the west and north-west, Rājasthānī towards the north, and Marāṭhī in the districts to the east and south. Gujarātī is also spoken by the higher class husbandmen in Khandesh to the north of the Tapti, and it is the language of trade throughout the district. Marāṭhī is, to some extent, spoken in the south and west. It is also the language of Government offices and schools, and it is stated to be gradually gaining ascendancy.

The principal language of the district is, however, a form of speech which shares some of the characteristic features of Gujarātī and in others agrees with Marāṭhī. It is sometimes simply called Khāndēśī, i.e., the language of Khandesh. Another name is Ahīrānī, i.e., the language of the Ahīrs or cowherds, a name which is also reported from other parts of India. Lastly, the denomination DhēḌ Gujarī connects the language with a group of low-caste husbandmen. The Kuṇ'bis are stated to speak a separate dialect called Kuṇ'bāū or Kuṇ'bi. It does not, however, differ from the current language of the district in any essential points.

The territory within which Khāndēśī is spoken does not exactly correspond to the district of Khandesh. It also comprises the northern border of Nasik and the Burhanpur Tahsil of Nimar. This latter district is still spoken of as Khandesh by the inhabitants. Burhanpur was the capital of Khandesh before Akbar overthrew the dynasty. The dialect of Burhanpur has formerly been classed as Varhāḍī, and only 136 Sonars were reported as speaking Ahīrānī.

Khāndēśī is further spoken by 500 individuals in Buldana, on the Khandesh frontier and in some border-villages near Jalgaon in Akola.

The following are the revised figures forwarded for the use of this Survey :—

Khandesh	1,050,000
Nasik	125,000
Nimar	42,036
Buldana	500
Akola	200
TOTAL	1,217,736

Of the 1,050,000 speakers returned from Khandesh, 400,000 have been reported as speaking Kuṇbāū.

AUTHORITY—

Gazetteer of the Bombay Presidency, Vol. xii, Khāndesh. Bombay, 1880. Account of the language on pp. 42 and ff.

Pronunciation.—A, ā and ē are not seldom interchanged; thus, sa, sā, and sē, he is; bāp-lē and bāp-lā, to the father; mānus-nē and mānus-nā, by a man. As in the Marāṭhī of Berar, neuter bases end in a where Dēśī Marāṭhī has ē; thus, asa wāṭ^ana, so it appeared; sōna, gold.

E is interchangeable with yā; thus, tē and tyā, they.

The palatals are pronounced as in Gujarātī and Rājasthānī. Thus, mī jāś, I go; thōḍā-ch dīn-thī, after a few days. Note the emphatic particle ch in the last instance. It agrees with Marāṭhī ts and apparently not with Gujarātī j. Compare, however, the pronunciation of j as s and ch in Bhīl dialects.

The cerebrals are pronounced as in Marāṭhī and Gujarātī. Thus, ghōḍā, a horse. The cerebral n is very irregularly used, and a dental n is often used instead; thus, kōṇī and kōnī, some one. In Nimar there seems to be a strong tendency to use the cerebral sound. Thus, we find mā-nā, my; tyā-nā, his.

The cerebral l is sometimes replaced by the dental one in one set of specimens received from Khandesh, where we find forms such as ḍōlā, eye; pal, run. The specimens forwarded from Nandurbar, Amalner, and Nimar, however, always distinguish the two l-sounds. The same is the case in the dialect spoken in the Dangs, and the writing of l instead of ḷ is, therefore, probably inaccurate. The cerebral l is commonly pronounced like the l mouillé in French, and it is, accordingly, often written as a y; thus, ḍōyā, eye; pay, run. Y instead of l is very common in the specimens received from Amalner. According to the District Gazetteer, however, it represents the common pronunciation in Khandesh. Compare the substitution of y and r for l in the Marāṭhī of Berar, and for r in Dravidian languages.

V is pronounced as in Marāṭhī and Gujarātī. It is sometimes dropped before i, as is also the case in the Marāṭhī of Berar. Thus, ichāra, it was asked; ikat, buying.

Aspirated letters sometimes lose their aspiration. Thus, the usual ablative postposition is written both thī and tī.

The Anunāsika is rarely met with and seems to be very faintly sounded. Thus, asā, but usually asa; thus, (ghar-)mā, in (the house); and only occasionally (hāt-)mā, on (the hand).

The phonetical system is, on the whole, the same as in Marāṭhī and Gujarātī. Where those two languages differ, it sometimes agrees with the latter, but in most cases with the former.

Nouns.—Gender.—There are three genders as in Marāṭhī and Gujarātī. The neuter is, however, constantly confounded with the masculine. Thus, it^ana wāṭ^anā, so-much appeared; pāp kar^anā sā, sin is made. In these instances the subject is neuter, but the verb is put in the masculine.

Number.—There are two numbers, the singular and the plural. They are, however, constantly confounded. Thus, the plural is used as an honorific singular in tyās-lē, to him; ghōḍās-nā jīn, the saddle of the horse. Much more common is the use of the singular instead of the plural; thus, chākar-lē, to the servants; hai dukkar rahinā, these swine are. Compare verbs below. The plural of weak masculine bases is formed without any addition. Thus, āṇḍōr, a son, and sons. Strong masculine bases end in ā in the singular, as is also the case in Marāṭhī. In the plural they usually preserve the ā as in Mālvī and Gujarātī; thus, ghōḍā, horses; chhōk^rrā, sons. Occasionally, however, we also find Marāṭhī forms such as ghōḍē.

Weak feminine bases seem to form their plural as in Marāṭhī and Mālvī; thus, gāyā, cows; pōrī, daughters. Strong feminine bases form their plural as in Marāṭhī and Mālvī; thus, ghōḍyā, mares.

Weak neuter bases seem to form their plural in ē; thus, duk^rrē, swine. But also dukkar, swine. Strong neuter bases end in a in the singular; thus, sōna, gold. No instances are available for the plural.

Case.—Cases are formed by adding suffixes. In the singular they are added directly to the base, as is also the case in Mālvī and Gujarātī. Thus, bāp-lē, to the father; ghōḍā-nā, of the horse. Marāṭhī forms, such as ghōḍyā-war, on a horse; tār^kkhē-nā, on that day, occur in a few instances. According to the grammatical sketch in the District Gazetteer, however, they are not justified. The only exception is said to be bhīṅgōtā, a bee, oblique bhīṅgōtyā.

The plural has a separate oblique form ending in s, or, in the case of weak masculine and neuter bases, ēs. Thus, bāpēs-lē, to fathers; pōris-lē, to daughters; bhitas-mā, in the walls; ghōḍās-nā, of the horses. It has already been noted that the singular form is often used instead; thus, bāp-lē, to fathers; mānus-lē and mān^sēs-lē, to the men.

The usual case postpositions are,—instrumental, sī, warī, ghāī; case of the agent, nā, nī, nē; dative lē, lā, nē, nā; ablative, thī, jaw^lūn; pāsīn, pāy, pāin, pun; genitive, nā, fem. nī, neut. na; locative mā, mē, mā̃, and majhār. Thus, dōr^kka-sī, with ropes; bāp-nā, by the father; hissā-lē, to (my) share; ghar-mā, in the house; ghōḍās-nā, of the horses.

In Nimar the instrumental and the case of the agent usually end in ē as in Gujarātī; thus, bāpē, by the father; bhukē, by hunger. Similar forms occasionally also occur in Khandesh.

The instrumental suffix sī is Marāṭhī. The same is the case with the ablative suffix jaw^lūn, which is not, however, used in any specimen but only occurs in a list of words received from Khandesh.

The suffixes of the case of the agent correspond to Marāṭhī na, nē̃ and Mālvī nē. The usual dative suffix is lē as in the Marāṭhī of Berar. Besides we also find the usual Marāṭhī form lā. L and n seem to be interchangeable in this suffix, so that we also find it in the forms nē and nā. We may, therefore, perhaps compare Mālvī and Gujarātī nē.

The usual suffix of the ablative is thī as in Gujarātī. With this latter language also the suffix of the genitive agrees. The locative suffix mā, mā̃ corresponds to Gujarātī mā̃, and mē to Mālvī mē̃, mē.

An old locative is ghar, in the house.

It will be seen that the inflexion of nouns agrees with Marāṭhī in some suffixes and the formation of most plural forms. The main principles of the inflexion, however, where the oblique form does not differ from the base, is quite different from that prevailing in Marāṭhī. In this respect Khândēśī approaches Gujarāṭī and Mālvi, with which languages it also shares most case suffixes.

Adjectives.—Adjectives are inflected in gender and number as in Marāṭhī. Thus, bhalā mānus, a good man; bhal'yā bāy'kā, good women. The form usually remains unchanged when the qualified noun is inflected. Thus, thōḍā-ch din-thī, after few days; tyā-nā gaḷā-mā, on his neck. In some cases, however, we find Marāṭhī forms, such as bhalyā mānus-lē, to a good man. An oblique form seems to end in i; thus, jan-nī ghar, in a man's house; tu-nī samōr, before thee.

Numerals.—The numerals are formed as in Marāṭhī. In Nimar, however, Gujarāṭī forms, such as chha, six, das, ten, pachās, fifty, and sō, hundred, are used. Sō and das also occur in Khandesh.

Pronouns.—The personal pronouns are mainly the same as in Marāṭhī. The case suffixes are the same as in the case of nouns. 'I' is mī, but also mai, as in Mēwātī. 'We' is ham or ām, as in Mēwātī; 'you' is tum, as in Mēwātī. Other forms are āmhū, we; āpan, we, including the person addressed; āmī, ām-ē and āmhū, by us; tumī, tumhī, and tumē, by you, etc.

The pronouns tō, that, he, and jō, which, have three genders as in Marāṭhī. The same is the case with hau and au, this: compare Marāṭhī hā, Rajpipla Bhilī āi, Māwchī, Dēhawālī and Dhōḍiā ō, Mālvi yō.

Kōn, who? does not change in the oblique form.

Verbs.—The Khândēśī verb has developed several characteristic features of its own. It has already been remarked that the two numbers are often confounded. Thus, jāyāt, they became, is also used in the sense of 'he became'; rahinā, he lived, is sometimes used with a plural subject.

Verbs are used in the active, passive, and impersonal constructions as in Marāṭhī and Gujarāṭī. Instead of the neuter form of the verb in the impersonal construction we, however, often find the masculine; thus, bāp-nā sāṅg'nā, instead of sāṅg'na, the father said. The past tense of transitive verbs often agrees with an inflected object, as is also the case in Gujarāṭī. Thus, tyā-ē ti-lē balāvī, he called her. The past tense of transitive verbs is sometimes also actively construed; thus, tō kar'nā, he did.

Verb substantive.—The present tense is formed from the base sa which also occurs in many Bhil dialects, and in the Ahirwāṭī and Mēwātī dialects of Rājasthānī. In Nimar we also find chhē as in Nimārī and Gujarāṭī. The forms sā, sē, and śē are used for all persons in the singular. The corresponding plural form is śētas, or, in Nimar, śētēs. Sas and śēs are also used instead of sā and śē, respectively, in the second and third persons singular. The singular form is often also used for the plural, and vice versa.

The past tense is formed from the base hōta or whata. Compare Marāṭhī hōta, Gujarāṭī hata. The regular forms are,—singular, 1, whatū; 2, whatā; 3, whatā; plural, 1, whatūt; 2, whatūt; 3, whatāt. The form whatā is only used with a masculine subject. The corresponding feminine and neuter forms are whatī and whata, respectively.

The first person singular is often identical with the second and third. Thus, mī hōtā, I was. The singular is also commonly used for the plural. Sometimes the terminations of the present tense are added; thus, hōtās, thou art, you are, they are, etc.

The infinitive is kōna or asna, to be. The conjunctive participle is hōi-san, having been. Marāṭhī forms such as asūn, however, also occur.

Finite verb.—There are only a few instances of the old present in the specimens. Thus, jāy-nā, he would not go.

The ordinary present has the same terminations as in the case of the verb substantive. Thus, karas, I, thou, or he, does; kar^atas, we, you, or they, do. In Nimar the plural is kar^ajēs, we do; kar^atēs, you and they do. In the same district we also find forms such as jāus, I go.

The past tense is often formed as in High Hindī; thus, lāgā, he began; tyā-nē mārā, he struck. Commonly, however, a suffix nā is added. Thus, tō paḍ^anā, he fell; tī paḍ^anī, she fell. This suffix must be compared with the common n-suffix in Bhili and the suffix nē of the past tense of Sadri Korwā and other broken dialects spoken by aborigines—See Vol. vi, p. 222. Compare also forms such as bandhāṇō, bound; dithāṇō, seen; quoted in the Khandesh Gazetteer from Northern Gujarātī.

The suffix nā is sometimes also transferred to the present tense; thus, mī chāl^anā, I go; tō rāhinā, he lives. A corresponding present participle is rāh^anā, being.

The wide use of this n-suffix for past time in Gujarātī, Bhili, and Khāndēśī (it also occurs in Eastern Hindī), may suggest that it is of a different origin from the Aryan suffix la. It can perhaps sometimes be compared with the suffix na which forms relative participles in Telugu and other Dravidian forms of speech or with the common n-suffix in Muṇḍā languages.

The usual singular form of the past tense ends in ā, fem. ī, neut. a, the corresponding plural in āt; thus, gyā, I, thou, or he, went; gyāt, we, you, or they, went. The first persons singular and plural have sometimes special forms; thus, mī gaū, I went; ham gaūt, we went. The singular is very often used instead of the plural; thus, jāyā, they became; lāgā, they began.

In the case of transitive verbs, the past tense agrees with the object or is put in the neuter singular. Thus, rup^ayā kānī lidhāt, who took the rupees? The final a of the past tense neuter is often dropped; thus, tyā-nī ghar bāndh, he built a house.

Periphrastic tenses are formed by adding the verb substantive to the present, past, and pluperfect participles. Thus, tyā khātā-tā, they were eating; tī raḍ^atī-tī, she was crying; pāp kida sē, sin has been done; chālēl sē, I have walked; marēlā hōtā, he had died. The past tense of the verb substantive has, as will be seen from the instances just quoted, sometimes the form tā, etc., in such compound tenses. This tā is perhaps only abbreviated from hōtā. It is, however, possible that it is identical with Mālvi and Mēwātī thā and the Bundēli tō. This latter form at least seems to occur in lai-thū, I took; lai-thāt, you took. Compare basī rah^anā sē, he is sitting.

The future is formed by adding an s-suffix, as in Gujarātī. In the third person singular and plural, however, we usually find the Marāṭhī forms. Thus, kar^asū, I shall do; kar^aśī, karīs and karī, thou wilt do; karī and karal, he will do; kar^asūt and kar^asū, we shall do; kar^asā, kar^asā(l), and kar^asāt, you will do; kar^atī(l) and kar^atīn, they will do. The form karī is said to be optionally used for all persons and numbers.

A past conjunctive is formed from the present participle; thus, mī ōlak^ah^atū, (if) I had recognized; tō āp^ana pēḥ bhar^atā, he would have filled his stomach; tī dētī, (if) she had given.

The imperative is formed as in Marāṭhī; thus, kar, do; chalā, go ye.

An infinitive is formed with the suffix ū (u); thus, karū lāg^anā, he began to do. Sometimes lāg^ana is added to the conjunctive participle; thus, tō karī lāg^anā, he began to do

Other verbal nouns end in nā, ā, and wā; thus, nāch^{nā}, dancing; khāwā-lē, in order to eat; sāṅg^{wā}-lē, in order to say; chārā-lē, in order to tend.

The present participle ends in t, or, in the strong form, tā; thus, yēt, coming; khātā, eating. The past participle passive ends in ā or nā; thus, kyā, kidā or kar^{nā}, done. It has already been stated that the suffix nā is occasionally also used to form a present participle; thus, rāh^{nā}, living.

A pluperfect participle is formed as in Gujarātī by adding l to the past participle; thus, chālēl, having gone; gayāl and gayōl, having gone; gamāinōl, who had been lost; mārēl, who had been struck; marēlā, who had died.

A future participle passive is formed as in Marāṭhī. Thus, pōt bhar^{wā}, the belly should be filled.

The conjunctive participle is formed as in Gujarātī by means of the suffix ī, to which n, nē, nī, san, and sanī may be added. Thus, dēī, having given; uṭhīn and uṭhinē, having arisen; khāyīnī, having eaten; lēī-san, having taken; mhanī-s^{nī}, having said. In a few instances we find Marāṭhī forms such as karūn, having done; mhanūn and mhūn, having said.

The preceding remarks will have shown the mixed nature of the Khāndeśī verb. Just as the language differs from Marāṭhī and approaches the languages of the inner circle in the formation of the oblique base, so it agrees with these latter forms of speech in other important test points. The past tense is not formed by means of an l-suffix; it has an s-future, and its conjunctive participle takes the suffix ī.

The preceding remarks will also have shown that there is a great variety of forms in common use. The regular inflexion will be seen from the short skeleton grammar which follows:—

ADJECTIVES.—Weak adjectives are not inflected. Strong adjectives, including the genitive, are inflected for gender and number, but not for case. Thus, dhāk^{lā}, small, fem. dhāk^{lī}, neut. dhāk^{lā}; plural dhāk^{lē} and dhāk^{lā}, fem. dhāk^{līyā}, neut. dhāk^{lē} (?).

The oblique Marāṭhī form occasionally occurs. Thus, dhāk^{lē} ghar-mā, in the small house.

In the past tense ā may be substituted for nā; thus, tī lāgī or *lāg*nī*, she began. Transitive verbs are passively construed in the past tense. Thus, tyā-nī pōthī wāchī, he read the book.C.—Irregular Verbs.—Several verbs form their past tense irregularly. Thus, jā-na, to go, past g(y)ā, first person also gā; yā-na, to come, past unā; hō-na, to become, past jāyā; *kar*na*, to do, past k(a)yā, kyē, kidā, and *kar*nā*; lē-na, to take, past līd(h)ā, līnhā, and lēnā; dē-na, to give, past dīd(h)ā, dīnā, etc.

Of the three specimens which follow, the two first have come from Khandesh, and the third represents the dialect of the Sonars of Burhanpur in Nimar.

The first specimen, a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son from Nandurbar Taluka, is a fairly good example. The second is the statement of a witness in a dialect which shows strong traces of the influence of Marāṭhī. The third specimen has been translated from a Marāṭhī reader. It more closely agrees with Gujarātī than is the case with the other specimens. Thus the instrumental always ends in ē, e.g., bāpē, by the father, etc.

On the fifteenth I had gone to the bazar of Sindkheda. I and Chudāman Tānāji went in the same carriage. After having done marketing we returned. On that day we went to Nirguḍi and came so far as half-a-mile from Warsi, when we were waylaid by thieves. One of the thieves threw a stone which hit me on the cheek. The thieves unloosened our bundles, both mine and Tānāji's. From my bundle they took two saries, a turban, and thirty-three rupee-pieces and two-and-a-half rupees in English coppers. From Tānāji's bundle they took six saries and three pieces of khan,¹ and seven rupees cash, of which four were in whole rupees and three in coppers. One of the thieves pricked me with a spear.

Then the thieves fled towards the garden of Nirguḍi, and we collected our kit and went to Warsi. There we made an information to the police master. The thieves were not then present, but he had their house watched. We do not know when they came in. Those thieves belong to our village, and I always see them. If I had shown that I recognized the thieves, then they would have killed us, and therefore I did not show any recognition.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain boy went to a school. One day he stole something which belonged to another boy, and brought it to his mother. Instead of punishing the boy as she ought to have done, she approved of his action and gave him a guava fruit to eat. After that time the boy began to commit greater and greater thefts as he grew up, till at last he was caught in a theft. The Government officers brought him away to be hanged. A crowd of people gathered in order to see the spectacle, and among them was also his mother who was incessantly sobbing and crying. When he caught sight of her, he asked the officers to let him join his mother for a moment. Out of pity they called the mother to him. Then he angrily bit her ear off. Seeing this the people said, 'see, see how wicked this boy is. Even on his way to the gallows he does not fail to commit so great a sin.' Having heard this he retorted, 'good people, listen to my statement. Even if I had now taken my mother's life, no blame would have been attached to me. And I will tell you why. When a small boy I once brought her something which I had stolen from another boy at school. Had she at that occasion punished me, and not given me a guava fruit, then I should not to-day have come to such a pass.'

The dialect spoken by the Kun'bis of Khandesh has been returned as Kun'bi or Kun'bāū. Specimens have been received from Amalner, and they show that the dialect does not differ from ordinary Khāndēśī, as will be seen from the Parable of the Prodigal Son which follows.

DĀNGĪ.

The Dangs State, on the western frontier of Khandesh, had, in 1891, a population of 32,900 souls, 31,700 of whom were stated to speak Dāngī. Specimens have been forwarded in that dialect, and one of them, a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, will be found below.

The so-called Dāngī is almost identical with the current language of Khandesh.

There is a tendency to pronounce an a as an o. Thus bās, a father, is pronounced as bōs, or rather as bās, with the same vowel as that occurring in English 'all', but pronounced through the nose. Similarly paḷ, to run, is pronounced pāl.

The cerebral ṇ is very irregularly used. Thus we find ānā and āṇā, he came; lāḡnā and lāḡṇā, he began. The pronunciation is probably always that of a dental n.

The inflexion of nouns and pronouns is the same as in Khāndēśī. Only the ablative suffix is tin and not thī or tī; thus, dur-tin, from a distance.

'I' is mā and mī; 'we' āmhi and āpan; 'you' tumhi, and so on. Jī, which, is apparently used for all genders. Thus, jī wāṭā, which share; jī-kāhi, what-ever. The neuter gender is, on the whole, very seldom used. We find neuter forms such as sagḡa, all, but usually the masculine, and sometimes also the feminine, is used instead. Thus, mōṭhā pāp, a great sin; asī tē-nā man-mā wanā, such a thing entered his mind.

The verb substantive has the same form as in Khāndēśī; thus, tō sē, he is. Sometimes, however, āhā or ha is used instead.

The inflexion of verbs does not call for any remarks. We may only note the Marāṭhī form jāin, I shall go; but mhaṇsū, I shall say; infinitives such as mhanu-lā, in order to say, etc.

The vocabulary is, to some extent, different from that of Khāndēśī. Compare bās, a father; gōhō, a man, and so on.

The specimen which follows is not very correct. It is, however, sufficient to show how closely Dāngī agrees with ordinary Khāndēśī.

RĀNGĀRĪ.

The Rāngārīs or dyers of Berar speak a dialect which is related to Khāndēśī. The dialect is not uniform, but differs slightly in the various districts. Some Rāngārīs have also abandoned their old speech and adopted the Marāṭhī used by their neighbours. Thus the specimens received from Ellichpur were written in Kōshṭī, a form of that language. It is, however, possible that some of the 250 speakers returned from that district use the same dialect as the Rāngārīs of Akola, and the Ellichpur figures have therefore been added to the estimated number of speakers in the other districts.

The revised figures for Rāngārī are as follows :—

Akola	2,700
Ellichpur	250
TOTAL	3,630

Two specimens of Rāngārī will be found below. The first is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son received from Akola, and the second the beginning of a similar version forwarded from the Melkapur Taluka of District Buldana. The latter is not correct, and in some minor points it presents forms which differ from those used in the Akola specimen. The difference is, however, not important, and it is, therefore, possible to deal with both specimens conjointly.

Pronunciation.—The pronunciation is mainly the same as in the Marāṭhī of Berar. Thus we find ḍōḷō and ḍōyō, an eye; īs and vīs, twenty, etc. The palatals are transliterated ch, j, etc. It is, however, probable that they are really pronounced ts, dz, etc., as in Marāṭhī.

Nouns.—The inflexion of nouns is mainly the same as in Gujarātī. Strong masculine bases end in ō, plural ā; strong feminine bases in ī, plural yā; and strong neuter bases in u. No instance is available of the plural of a strong neuter noun. Thus, pōr'gō, son; pōr'gā, sons; pōr'gī, daughter; pōr'gyā, daughters; sōnu, gold. A suffix hān or hun (as in Mālvi) is sometimes added in the plural; thus, mōl'karī-hun-nā, to the labourers; chāk'rō-hān-nā, to the servants. Compare the honorific pronoun tē-hān, he, in the second specimen. The Gujarātī plural suffix ō in chāk'rō-hān-nā also occurs in bāp-ō-nō, to fathers.

The usual case-suffixes are, dative nō, na; case of the agent nē, na, n; ablative tī, tē; genitive nō, nī, nu; locative mā, mō. Thus, bāp-nō, bāp-na, to the father; bāp-nē, by the father; bāp-nā pās-tī, from the father; mānus-nō, of a man; ghar-mā, in the house; pāy-mō, on the feet.

Pronouns.—The following are the personal pronouns :—

mī , I	tū , thou	tē , he.
mā-rō , my	tā-rō , thy	tē-nō , his.

Other forms are myā, by me; tē-na, by him; tamayē (sic.), to him; tē-hun-na, to them. 'Who?' is kōn, and 'what?' is kāy.

Verbs.—The present tense of the verb substantive is sa or sē in all persons and numbers. The corresponding past tense is hōtō, fem. hōtī, neut. hōtu. The plural is hōtā or hōtē, etc.

The present tense of finite verbs ends in s. Thus, from mār^{nu}, to strike, we find,—

Sing. 1. mārus	Plur. 1. mārus
2. māras	2. māras, mārōs
3. māras	3. māras

The form mārus, I strike, is perhaps a honorific plural. Forms such as rahēs and rahis, I am, are used as well.

The suffix of the past tense is ī or ē. Thus, gayē, I, thou, or he, went; gayā, we, you, or they, went; myā karē, or karī, I did. We also find forms such as gaē-n, he went; paḍē-l, it fell. Compare Khāndēśī.

A perfect and a pluperfect are formed from the past; thus, sāp^ḍē-s, he has been found; gayē-tō, I had gone.

The future of mār^{nu}, to strike, is inflected as follows:—

Sing. 1. mārīs	Plur. 1. mārūs, mār^sū
2. mārīs	2. mār^sō
3. mār^sī	3. mār^sī

The imperative is formed as in Gujarātī. Thus, mār, strike; bas-ō, sit ye.

Conjunctive participles are formed by adding the suffixes ī (ē), īn, or ī-san. Thus, wāḍī, having divided; jāīn, having gone; uṭhī-san, having arisen.

For further details the specimens which follow should be consulted.

BANJĀRĪ OR LABHĀNĪ AND BAHRUPIĀ.

BANJĀRĪ OR LABHĀNĪ.

The Banjārās are the well-known tribe of carriers who are found all over Western and Southern India. One of their principal sub-castes is known under the name of 'Labhānī,' and this name (or some related one) is often applied to the whole tribe. The two names appear each under many variations, such as Banjārī, Wanjārī, Briujārī, Labhānī, Labānī, Labānkī, Labānā, Lamānī, Lambādī, and Lambānī. At the census of 1891, the number of Banjārās (under any of their names) recorded was as follows:—

Province or State.	Number recorded.
Ajmer-Merwara	102
Bengal and States	31
Berar	110,008
Bombay and States	137,295
Central Provinces and States	58,048

In many parts of India these people merely use the language of the population of the country in which they dwell, but in Berar, Bombay, the Central Provinces, the Panjab, the United Provinces, and Central India, they are reported to have a language of their own, the name of which varies according to the local name of the tribe. Although widely spread over North-Western India, the Banjārās are strongest in the Deccan, where they are found in the greatest numbers, and where they retain much more of their primitive manners and customs than elsewhere. The name 'Banjārā' and its congeners is probably derived from the Sanskrit Vāṇijyakāraḥ, a merchant, through the Prakrit Vāṇijjaāraō, a trader.¹ The derivation of 'Labhānī' or 'Labānī,' etc., is obscure. It has been suggested that it means 'salt carrier' from the Sanskrit lavanah, salt, because the tribe carried salt, but this explanation goes against several phonetic rules, and does not account for the forms of the word like 'Labhānī' or 'Lambānī.'

The tribe has been known in India for centuries. It appears to be a mixed race and to owe its origin and organization to the wars of the Delhi Emperors in Southern India, where they carried the commissariat of the armies. They are often said to be mentioned by name in Sanskrit literature so early as the 6th century A.D., but this is a mistake. The earliest certain dated reference² to them is believed to be in the Tārīkh-e Khān-Jahān Lōdī of Nī'āmātu'llāh, written about 1612 A.D., and referring to events of 1504 A.D. He says :—

'As scarcity was felt in his [the Sultān's] camp, in consequence of the non-arrival of the Banjārās, he despatched 'Azam Humāyūn for the purpose of bringing in supplies.'

That the tribe existed and practised the vocation of grain-carriers long before this is certain, and it is probable that the Sanskrit writer Daṇḍin (about 6th century A.D.) had them in his mind, though he did not distinctly mention them, when he wrote the oft-quoted passage above referred to.³

The Banjārās of the Deccan claim descent from the great Brahman and Rajput tribes of Northern India, and this is partly borne out by the fact that their language is certainly connected with that spoken at the present day in Western Rajputana.

The following are the more important accounts of the Banjārās.

Separate figures for the Banjāri language were not systematically recorded for all provinces in the Census of 1891, and it is therefore impossible to compare census figures with those given above.

Banjāri falls into two main dialects—that of the Panjab and Gujarat, and that of elsewhere (of which we may take the Labhānī of Berar as the standard). To these we may add the Labānki of Muzaffargarh in the Panjab, which differs from that spoken in the rest of the province. The dialects of the Kakērs, or comb-makers, of Jhansi in the United Provinces, and of the Bahrūpiās of the Panjab have also, on examination, turned out to be the same as the Labhānī of Berar. We therefore find the total number of speakers of Banjāri to be as follows:—

Labānki of Muzaffargarh	436
Labānki of the rest of the Panjab	22,433
Labānī of Gujarat	1,300
	<hr/>	23,733
Other Banjāri	131,419
Kakēri	40
Bahrūpiā of the Panjab	2,872
	<hr/>	134,331
TOTAL, Speakers of Banjāri		<hr/> 158,500 <hr/>

All these different dialects are ultimately to be referred to the language of Western Rajputana. The few speakers of Labānki in Muzaffargarh employ ordinary Bikanēri, and my only reason for entering their language above is that it is not the vernacular of Muzaffargarh, which is Lahndā.

The Labānki of the Panjab is most nearly connected with the Bāgrī spoken in Hissar and in the adjoining parts of Bikaner.

For the other Banjāri dialects, we must take the Labhānī of Berar as the standard. It is in this locality that the tribe has most strongly preserved its racial characteristics, and employs the purest form of its speech. Elsewhere (except in the Panjab and Gujarat) the same dialect is spoken, but more and more corrupt as we go eastwards, westwards, or northwards from Berar. I have little information regarding the Banjāri of Hyderabad and the rest of Southern India, as the Linguistic Survey does not touch these tracts, but from what I have learnt concerning it, it appears to me that the dialect of Hyderabad closely resembles that of Berar, while that of Madras is more mixed with the surrounding Dravidian languages.

The Labhānī of Berar possesses the characteristics of an old form of speech, which has been preserved unchanged for some centuries. It may be said to be based partly on Mārwarī and partly on Northern Gujarātī, and gives one the idea of being derived from the original language from which these closely connected forms of speech have sprung in comparatively late times.

In the following pages, I shall first deal with the Labhānī of Berar as the standard. I shall then describe the Lamānī of the Bombay Deccan, next the Labhānī of the Central Provinces, and then the Banjāri of the United Provinces. In connexion with this, I shall deal with the Kakēri of Jhansi. I shall next describe the Labānki of the Panjab (devoting a few lines to that of Muzaffargarh), and then the Labānī of Gujarat. Finally, I shall describe the Bahrūpiā of the Panjab, which properly belongs to the Berar dialect, but which is here placed on account of its geographical habitat.

It should be observed that nowhere, not even in Berar, is Banjārī a pure language. It is everywhere mixed, to a greater or less extent, with the vernacular of the country in which its speakers dwell. The amount of the mixture varies greatly, and is probably, in each case, much dependent on the personal equation of the speaker.

No specimens of Banjārī have been received from the Central India Agency. We may assume that the language is the same as that of the Central Provinces and of Berar.

LABHĀNĪ OF BERAR.

The Labhānī or Wanjārī of Berar is a rough kind of Western Rājasthānī much mixed with Gujarātī. It does not vary materially over the whole province, and two specimens will suffice. Its pronunciation is in the main that of Berar, not of Gujarat or Rajputana. For instance there is no change of s to h or of chh to s.

No one who is familiar with Gujarātī or Mārwarī will find any difficulty in reading it. I therefore give only a brief account of its grammatical peculiarities.

In pronunciation the cerebral l is common, as in gōlā, collected. There is a tendency to aspirate consonants, as in mōṭhō, for mōṭō, great; ēkhāḍī, for ēkāḍī, a certain one; chhumō for chumō, kissed; āghē or āgē, before.

The vowel scale is indefinite. We find i changed to a in words like dan, for dīn, a day; barājē, he shines; and u changed to a in sakhī for sukhī, happy. A final ē is often weakened to a, as in chha for chhē, he is; na or nē, to; ra or rē, the locative of rō, of. Similarly a final ō often becomes ū, as in dēkhū for dēkhō, seen; rū for rō, of. Initial u often becomes wa, as in waḍhāl-panō (for uḍhāl-panō), debauchery; waḍā-dēnō for uḍā-dēnō, he squandered.

The declension of nouns is very irregular. No doubt all strong nouns of a basis originally had their nominatives singular in ō, with an oblique form in ā. Thus, ghōḍō, a horse; oblique form ghōḍā. But the Labhānās in the course of their wanderings have also picked up the Hindōstānī idiom of making these nouns have their nominatives in ā, with an oblique form in ē. Thus, ghōḍā, a horse; oblique form ghōḍē. We meet the same word sometimes with one termination and sometimes with the other, and there is absolutely no rule on the subject. It is a matter of mere caprice. We even find both forms in the same sentence. Good examples are ghanō āchhō kapḍā, a very good robe; mārō chhōrā, my son; mōṭhō chhōrō, the elder son.

Many nouns, even those ending in consonants, have an oblique form in ē. Thus bāpū, a father; bāpē-nē, to a father: dan, a day; danē-mē, in (a few) days: khēt, a field; khētē-mē, in a field: hāt, a hand; hātē-mē, on (his) hand: bhūk, hunger; bhūkē-tī, by hunger, and many others. The plural of nouns in ō or ā ends in ā or ē. Thus bēṭō, a son, plural bēṭā; bēṭā, a son, plural bēṭē. Examples of the plural of feminine nouns are bīr, a woman, plural bīrē; bēṭī, a daughter, plural bēṭiyā. Other nouns form their plural as in Western Rājasthānī.

For the various cases we have the following postpositions.

For the agent, we have nē, often weakened to na, as in ō-nē, by him; jē-na, by whom. The use of the agent case is, however, rare. More usually the nominative is used, and governs transitive verbs just as if they were intransitives. Thus we have mē mārīyō, I struck; ham mārē, we struck. As an example of the agent case, we have ō-nē mēlyō, he sent. On the other hand we have bāp kyō, the father said.

For the dative-accusative we have the usual locatives of the genitive postpositions. Thus nē, often weakened to na, and rē (or ra). Thus bāpē-nē, to the father; māṭī-na, to a man; dēs-rē, to a country. We have also the form nū, sometimes pronounced nō, which was probably picked up in the Panjab. Thus bāpē-nū and bāpē-nō, to the father.

The suffix of the ablative is usually tī as in waḍhāl-panē-tī, by debauchery.

The suffix of the genitive is usually rō. Sometimes we meet the Gujarātī nō, as in bēṭi-nō, of a daughter. Rō has its oblique masculine rā, its feminine rī, and its locative (agreeing with nouns in the locative and dative) rē, as in Mārwārī. It is sometimes pronounced rū. The whole series is, however, much confused. We find cases of rā being used for rō, and vice versā. Rē often becomes ra, and is once (ō-rē māl-matā, his property) used for rō. Examples are bāpē-rō bēṭō, the son of the father; but ō-rā (not ō-rō) pēṭ, his belly; ghōḍē-rō ghōḡīr, the saddle of the horse; bak^rrā-ra (for bak^rrā-rō) pilā, the young of a goat; ō-rō (for ō-rā) gaḷā-ma, on his neck; jhāḍē-rē hēṭē, at the bottom of the tree.

The usual sign of the locative is mē, ma, or mā. Thus, hātē-mē, on the hand; gaḷā-ma, on the neck; sudē-mā, in one's right-mind.

The sense of gender is very capricious. Thus we have sēwā (feminine) kidō (masculine), service was done.

Adjectives follow the Mārwārī rules. They are put in the locative in ē to agree with a noun in that case.

Pronouns.—The pronouns of the first and second person make no distinction between the nominative and the agent cases. Both are the same. The following forms occur:—

Mē, ma, may, I; mhārō, mārō, my; manē, mana, mārē, māra, to me; ham, we; hamārō, our.

Tū, tū, thou; tārō, thy; tanē, tana, tārē, tāra, to thee; tam, tamō (this is a Gujarātī form), you; tamārō, your.

For Demonstrative pronouns (including the pronoun of the third person, we have ū, ō, he, that, they; ō-nē, by him (but ū kyō, he said); ō-rō, his; ō-rē, ō-na, to him; ānu-rō or anu-rō, their.

Tō-nē, tō-na, him, to him; tē, they.

Ā or ī, this; yē ghōḍē-nō, of this horse.

Āpan, we (including the person addressed); āpⁿnē-nē, to us; āpⁿnō, own.

Jō, jakō, who, what; jē-na, by whom; kūn, who? kē-rō, whose? kāi, what? kaśō-rō, of what? kaśā-na, for what, why? kōi, anyone; ēāl^rrā, this many; kat^rrā, how many (with pleonastic k of Rājasthānī, kat^rrā-k); sē, all, the whole.

Conjugation.—The present tense of the verb substantive closely follows colloquial Gujarātī. It is as follows:—

	Sing.	Plur.
3	chhē or chha	chhē or chha

It will be observed that, as in some forms of colloquial Gujarātī, chha may be used for all persons and both numbers.

The past is vētō. Vētō is sometimes written whētō, which shows that the word is only a by-form of the Gujarātī hatō. When used as an auxiliary it becomes simply tō, as in colloquial Gujarātī. Thus mārⁿtō-tō, was striking. Indeed vētō-tō, itself (corresponding to the Hindōstānī hōtā-thā), is generally used to mean 'was.'

Wherever it occurs in the specimens or list, the masculine plural of vētō is vētē, not vētā, as it ought to be.

As for Finite verbs, the Infinitive, Present Participle, and Past Participle are as in Rājasthānī, viz., mārⁿō, to strike; mār^tō, striking; māryō, struck. In the past participle, however, the y is often omitted, so that we also have mārō. So dēkhū, for dēkhō, seen, and others.

The simple present is conjugated much like the corresponding tense in Gujarātī and Rājasthānī. Thus—

I strike, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārū	mārā
2	mārē	mārō
3	mārē	mārē

The present definite is also conjugated as in these languages, the auxiliary verb being added to the simple present, and not to the present participle. Thus mārū-chhū or mārū-chha, I am beating. Other examples are (often with the sense of a future) marū-chhū, I die; khāū-chha, we may eat; hōū-chha, let us become.

The Imperfect is mār^tō-tō, was striking.

The Past tense is as usual, except that this tense in the case of transitive verbs agrees with the subject. Thus mē māryō, I struck; ham mārē, we struck.

The Perfect is māryō-chhū or māryō-chhē, I have struck. In the former case, the auxiliary verb agrees with the subject. So also in pāp kidō-chhū, I have done sin.

The Pluperfect is māryō-tō, had struck. In uṭhō-rī, he got up, the rī is probably a contraction of rahē.

The Future is mainly based on the h-future of Mārwarī. It has some peculiar forms. It is conjugated as follows:—

I shall strike, etc.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	mārhiyū or mārhyū	} The same as the singular.
2	mārhiyū or mārhyū
3	mārhiyē or mārhyē

In the specimens we find chha added in jāhyū-chha, I will go; uṭhī-chha, I will arise; āyī-chha, it will come. The exact meaning of these forms is doubtful. The chh possibly really represents an s, so that we have here examples of an s-future, as in Gujarātī. Another form in the specimens is kahēn, I will say. This seems to be borrowed from Marāṭhī.

Irregular Past Participles are khādō, eaten; kidō, done; dinō or dēnō, given; lābhō, got; kyō, kāwō, or kēhō, said; ryō, remained; gyō or gō, gone. In vēlā paḍ-gē, want fell, gē seems to be used as a feminine instead of gī.

The conjunctive participle is formed by adding an to the root. Thus māran, having beaten. A sort of continuous conjunctive participle is formed by adding tānī (for thānē, having become, as we see from the Central Provinces specimens) to the root, as in rē-tānī, while remaining; dē-tānī, while giving.

Vocabulary.—The Rājasthānī idiom of employing kō-nī, at-all not, for the negative is very common.

The following unusual words occur in the specimen :—

ajī, or wajī, and

bāṭī, bread

ḍhyā, with

kēḷḍā, kēḷḍū, a calf

mūṭī, a man

yāḍī, a mother.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A quarrel took place between a father and a son; and the latter got angry with the former, and set out on a journey. The mother remonstrated, saying, 'child, return back;' he did not heed his mother, but being angry and indifferent went forth; and set out for a distant country. When he went a little distance ahead, he heard a peacock scream on his right, and a jackal howl on the left.¹ He then looked before him; and saw one road of six months resulting in happiness; the other of three months resulting in grief. The son left the happy one and took the other full of misery. No sooner did he throw a glance ahead than he saw a tiger lying down asleep. He got up and said, 'child, where are you going?' The boy said, 'I am going to a distant country.' The tiger said 'what do you go for to a distant country? Show me your skill in fighting once or twice here. Child, begin you with the first stroke.' The boy said, 'no nunkey, you begin with the first stroke.' At last the boy gave the first cut, but missed, and the tiger sprang up, seized him, and killed him.

I.

(A poem in honour of Sēwābhāyā, a Labhāṇā hero.)

There was Sēwābhāyā. His body was brilliant as silver and gold.
 Sēwābhāyā is dead and gone. He left his throne to Sūkā, and gave Jētā his blessing.

Great wealth had Sēwābhāyā amassed. He had the horse Tulārām.

Worldly wealth had he in plenty. He had drums and umbrellas as tokens of his royalty.

Mēhmadyā the Bard sings this song. To him it is every one's duty to give many presents of food and money.

II.

(In praise of Dharmītō Bābā, who planted a grove and built a masonry well.)

(1) There is a grove and a garden, and a well built as an act of charity, where shines the great Rām himself in all his glory (and grants all the wishes of the donor). May Rām endow thee with good prosperity.

(2) Sītā the chaste, Lakshman the faithful, Hanumān the 'mighty warrior, are all with thee. May Rām endow thee with good prosperity.

(3) It is useless to make two pilgrimages to Dwārakā, for it is in thy heart that God dwells. There, too, is the Dwārakā of Bālājī,¹ the Dwārakā of Kṛishṇa. May Rām endow thee with good prosperity.

(4) Dharmītō Bābā, the devotee of Bālājī, gives gifts in full handfals. May Rām endow thee with good prosperity.

LAMĀNĪ OF NASIK.

The Labhānī or, as it is locally called, Lamānī of Nasik differs in no way from that of Berar. As a specimen, it will be sufficient to give an extract from a popular poem. The specimen gives a good example of the very peculiar vocabulary of the tribe. I am not certain that all the words have been correctly translated. They are not found in any dictionary, and I give the meanings as they have been reported to me.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

(The song deals with the adventures of the Labhānā hero Isarā. In the first verses he is addressed by his father.)

(1) 'O Isarā, break our camp and load our pack-bullocks. Look out for a wide plain, and there let the cattle loose. Make a room of the grain-bags and over them stretch a red cloth so as to form a tent. (5) Put the bullock harness into water to clean it.'

(Isarā demands to be married at once, but his father at first refuses.)

A quarrel arose between the father and the son. 'My son, let this year pass. In the meantime take the bullock harness out of water.'

(Isarā insists, and at length the father consents to an immediate marriage. In the following lines the marriage procedure is referred to.)

'Send for horses loaded with ghee and molasses, (10) and for bullocks laden with rice. Call a meeting of wise men and wise women (and take their advice). Here come the horses laden with ghee and molasses, and the bullocks laden with rice. (15) Send a barber to invite the women, and on Saturday have the veil stretched out.¹ Make five jarfuls of bhang-sherbet, and offer five pots full to the family priest. Invoke blessings from the wise men, (2) and make good arrangements for giving the guests a dinner.'

(The rest of the poem, which is a long one, has not been recorded. It describes Isarā's marriage, and the heroic feats performed by him and by his bride. Isarā's best friend had become his foe on account of the marriage, having become himself enamoured of the bride. It was with him that the struggle took place, which resulted in Isarā's complete victory.)

LAMĀNĪ OF BELGAUM.

It will suffice to give one more specimen of the Lamānī of the Bombay Deccan, a short extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son which comes from Belgaum. An example is, indeed, hardly necessary, for it will be seen that the dialect is the same as that of Berar. The only small point of difference is that in words like ra, to, the final a is sometimes dropped so that we get simply r. Thus, māṭi-r, for māṭi-ra, to a man.

LABHĀNĪ OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

The Labhānī of the Central Provinces differs only from that of Berar in being more corrupt. It is everywhere mixed with the local vernacular of the tract where the speakers are found, but its basis, as in Berar, is the language of West Rajputana and North Gujarat.

I give three specimens of it, one from the centre of the Provinces, one from the west, and one from the east.

LABHĀNĪ OF MANDLA.

The following version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son comes from Mandla, and is a good example of the Labhānī current in the Central Provinces. Everywhere in these Provinces it is based on the same dialect as that which we found in Berar, but it is always much corrupted by being strongly mixed with the local dialect of the place. I have selected the Mandla version because it is fairly central, and because it has been very carefully prepared. Here it will be seen that the language is mixed with the Eastern Hindī of that district. Indeed, the Eastern Hindī element often predominates to the total exclusion of the Labhānī forms. For instance, in the very first line we have the Eastern Hindī genitive termination kēr, instead of the true Labhānī rō or nō.

The Labhānī element itself is a good deal altered. We find the letter r by itself used to indicate the genitive case, instead of rō, and this r is even added to words which are already in the genitive as in tārō-r, thy, and even tārī-r bhāī, thy brother. This r is even added to the adverb ōtē, there, so that we have ōtē-r, of there, used to mean 'of him.'

For the locative postposition we have thānī or thānē, as in galō-thānī, on the neck. Thānī is literally the Gujarātī thainē, having been, and it, as well as the cognate form chhānē or chhānī, formed from the verb chhē, he is, is used to make conjunctive participles, as in uṭh-chhānē, having arisen; dēkh-thānē, having seen; daur-thānī, having run. So in Berar we had dē-tānī (for dē-thānī), on giving.

The verb substantive is conjugated as follows:—

Present.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	chhū	chhā
2	chhāi, chhē	chhō, chhē
3	chhāi, chhē	chhāi, chhē

The plural is often used for the singular. Thus, ham chhā, I am.

The following very peculiar forms are given in a list received from Mandla. I have met them nowhere else, and hence have been unable to check them.

	Sing.	Plur.
1	chhukan	chhūk^aran
2	chhūk^aran
3	chhūk^aran

The word for 'was,' 'were' is achchhē or chhē. The Eastern Hindī rahē is also common.

Chhē is added to almost any verbal form without affecting the meaning. Thus, beside present definites like marī-chhē, I am dying, and imperfects like khat-chhē, they were eating, we have it added to the simple past, as in kahō-chhē, he said; gaya-chhē, he went; kāṭ-chhē, he spent (time); so we have in the future jawā-chhē, we (I) will go; kah'wā-chhē, we (I) will say. In fact the future is almost the same as the present definite, mār-chhū, I will strike; mār-chhō, you will strike; and so on, besides mārū-chhē; mārō-chhē, and other forms.

Again chhē is added to the Imperative in kar-chhē, make (me as one of thy servants); and even to a verbal noun as in rahanwārē-chhē madhē, amongst the inhabitants. In bhāran-chhē, he wished to fill, the words appear to mean literally 'he was for filling.'

As already said, the conjunctive participle is formed by adding chhānē, thānē or thānī. We have also the Eastern Hindī suffix ke, and a parallel form, kō, in nikāl-kō, having taken out.

In one instance kahō, he said, is contracted to kōh.

Note the Rajasthānī method of forming casual verbs by adding r, as in rakhārō, kept.

LABHĀNĪ OF HOSHANGABAD.

In Hoshangabad, in the west of the Central Provinces, the Labhānī is corrupt like that of Mandla, but not so corrupt. On the other hand, many of the corruptions of the Labhānī of this district clearly come from the Punjab. This is specially evident in the frequent use of dā (dē, dī) as the suffix of the genitive, and of nū as the suffix of the dative. The basis is, however, the same as that of the Labhānī of Berar, viz., the language of Western Rajputana and Gujarat.

The following points may be noted. There is the usual rō suffix of the genitive, as in lōṛiyā-rī mā, the mother of the children; kuṛmī-rā ghar, in a Kurmī's house; u-raī bōlī, by her (i.e., she) said.

We have the Panjābī dā series in bām'nā-dī (for -dē) ghar, in the house of a Brāhman; kē-dā bāṇā, the arrows of some; putā-dī-ōrat, the wife of the son; u-dē, to him, for her; u-dyā byāw, her marriage.

The Gujarātī-Panjābī nō series is also common, as in putā-nī ōrat, the wife of the son; putā-nī, puttā-nī, to the son (or sons); u-nē putā-nē, to her son; puttā-nī chalā-gyā, by the six sons it was gone, the six sons went away; jē-nī, by whom; khāṇā-nū, for eating; dharī-nō, having carried. Note that the n of the suffix is often cerebralized.

Note how the word yāḍī, mother, here appears under the form yāṇī, in the meaning of 'female.'

Note also the use of vē (i.e. whē) for 'was.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain king had seven sons. One day they all went up on to the top of the palace, and each shot an arrow. The arrow of one fell on a king's house, of another on a potter's, of another on an ascetic's, of another on an oil-monger's, of another on a Brahmaṇ's, of another on a Kuṛmī's, and of another on a merchant's. The oil-monger had a daughter, and the prince who shot the arrow which fell on his house married her. Similarly, another prince married the Kuṛmī's daughter, another the merchant's, another the potter's, another the Brāhmaṇ's, and another the king's. But in the ascetic's house there was only a she-monkey, and the prince whose arrow fell there married her.

Then the mother of the princes went round to eat dinner at each of her seven sons' houses. Last of all she came to the house of the prince who had married the monkey and he made dinner ready. 'Where is your wife?' said she. So he went off and came back with the monkey sitting on his shoulder. As soon as he came before the queen, the monkey took off her outer garment, and, lo and behold, she turned into a beautiful fairy. Then they all sat down and ate their meal. When the old queen got up to go home she said, 'the wives of my six other sons can't cook a bit, but this son's wife has given me a first-rate dinner.' So she had a palace built for the couple, and banished the six other sons with their wives. So the prince who married the monkey got a fine palace to live in, and she turned into a beautiful fairy. That is the way that luck turns out.

LABHĀNĪ OF KANKER.

As a last example of the Labhānī of the Central Provinces, I give a specimen from the State of Kanker, which lies well to the east. It will be seen that, if we take the Berar Labhānī as the standard, it is much purer than that of Mandla or of Hoshangabad. The infusion of the local Ohhattisgarhī is comparatively small. Note the pronunciation of bāgh, a tiger, as bahāg. The Gujarātī root sābhar, hear, appears here as sāmar. The postposition nē is frequently employed to indicate the case of the Agent. Note also, warī meaning 'he'; kauh, said; the Rājasthānī futures, dihū, I shall give, and vīhai (for whaihai), it will be; and the numerous conjunctive participles in thānīn.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A tiger once lay asleep in a certain forest, when there suddenly came out from their hole a number of mice. The tiger, startled by the noise they made, awoke, and his paw fell on one of them. In his anger he determined to kill the little creature, but the mouse made a humble petition saying, 'let Your Honour compare Your Honour's self and this poor me. What credit will Your Honour get from killing so tiny a creature?' Then the tiger relented and let him go, and the mouse said, 'bless my luck! Your Honour saw the difference between us, and let me go. Some day or other I will return this kindness which Your Honour has shown me.' When the tiger heard these words he laughed in scorn, and took his way into the heart of the forest. Some days afterwards the forest men set a springe for the tiger, as he had been every now and then killing their cattle, and into the springe the tiger fell. The tiger did his best to get out of the noose, but could not do so, and, feeling fit to die for grief, began to roar. Now that very mouse whom the tiger had released heard the roar, and recognized the voice as that of his benefactor. So he searched about till he found him lying caught in the springe. With his sharp teeth he cut the string of the noose, and released the tiger.

BANJARI OF THE UNITED PROVINCES.

The Labhānī of the United Provinces is usually called 'Banjārī.' It closely resembles that of Berar, though it is much corrupted, and is also much mixed with the vernacular dialects of the localities in which it is found. As in Berar, its basis is the language of Western Rajputana and of Northern Gujarat. I give a complete set of examples from the district of Saharanpur, and also a short extract from Khēri. It is unnecessary to give further specimens, as throughout the provinces the only variation is the greater or less admixture of the local dialect.

BANJĀRĪ OF SAHARANPUR.

We may note the following peculiarities of the Banjārī of Saharanpur:—

As in Northern Gujarat, a cerebral ḷ is represented by r. Thus, kāl, famine, becomes r.

As usual the nominative of strong a-bases ends in ō, with an oblique form in ā. Thus, ghōrō, a horse, oblique form, ghōrā. Nouns ending in consonants have an oblique form in ē. Thus, māl, property; genitive mālē-rō: mulk, a country; locative, mulkē-rē-māi, in a country: bāt, a thing: bātē-rē, for a thing.

The usual case postpositions are—agent, nē; dative-accusative, rē, as in gāorā-rē, to a man; ū-rē, him. Sometimes we have the Gujarātī nē, as in nōk-rē-nē, to a servant. For the genitive we generally have rō (oblique rā, feminine rī). When it agrees with a noun in the locative, it becomes rē. Sometimes we have the Gujarātī nō, as in ū-nō, of him. For the locative we have māi, usually suffixed to the locative of the genitive, as in mulkē-rē-māi, in a country.

The word for 'two' is dī, as in Berar, not dō.

The Pronouns generally are as in Berar. Manahī or manēhē, is 'to me.' The word for 'he' is ū or uōhō. 'One's own' is ap-rō. Āp is also used to mean 'we,' including the person addressed. Its genitive is then āp-rō, and its dative āp-rē.

The Present tense of the Verb Substantive is conjugated as follows:—

	Sing.	Plur.
2	chhē	chhō or chhē .
3	chhē	chhē , chhāi .

It will be observed that chhē can be used for all persons in both numbers.

The Past Tense is the Mālvi thō, was. Its feminine is thī. We should expect its masculine plural to be thā, but in the places where it occurs the ordinary Hindōstani thē is used instead. In other parts of the United Provinces chhē is also employed for the past tense.

The Finite verb is as in Berar. The definite present is formed by suffixing the auxiliary verb to the simple present, and not to the present participle. Thus, marū-chhū, I am dying.

The Past Participle does not take y. Thus, kahō, not kahyō, said.

The Conjunctive Participle usually takes the suffix tī or thīn (compare the Berar tānī, Central Provinces thānī). Thus, chhadā-tī, having left; kar-thīn, having done; and many others. We have also a form like dēkhīn, having seen. Compare Gujarātī mārīnē, having struck.

The Rājasthānī negative kō-nī, occurs.

Transitive verbs in the past tense generally, but not always, have the subject in the agent case.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

I served for ten years in the State of Nāhan, and came home a year ago. The climate there is very good, but does not please the people of our country, for the mountaineers there are very ignorant, and we find it difficult to understand their speech. But the Rājā of Nāhan is making greater efforts than the neighbouring Rājās are doing to educate the people, and to polish their language. The Rājā's mind is full of this idea,—

'I must teach my subjects to read, and must polish their language.' With this object he is establishing schools here and there.

The people of that country very slowly understand our language, but now that the Rājā is endeavouring to improve theirs, it will very quickly become quite polished.

OUDH BANJĀRĪ.

In Oudh, the Banjārī does not differ from that of Saharanpur. A few short sentences will serve to show this. I have selected them to exemplify the use of chhē to mean 'was,' as stated when dealing with the Saharanpur Banjārī. We may note a few Rājasthānī forms which did not occur in the specimens from the latter district. Such are man, I, and thaĩ, thou.

Two brothers, living in the same house, used to quarrel about their property. One said to the other, 'let us partition the property. We can call four arbitrators, and they can divide it half and half, and then whether I use my property or dissipate it, it will be no concern of yours.'

KĀKERĪ.

The Kakērs are a small tribe of comb-makers who are settled in the district of Jhansi in the United Provinces. They are said to have immigrated thither from Ajmer about two hundred years ago. They have a language of their own. Only some forty speakers of it have been recorded. I give two specimens of it,—an extract from the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and a folk-tale.

It will be seen that the language is exactly the same as that form of Labhāni of which the standard is found in Berar. In other words, it is based on the language of South-West Rajputana and of North Gujarat.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A certain king had a very beautiful daughter. His private chaplain looked upon her with evil intent, and to gratify it, said to the king that she was under the influence of some evil omen. The king stood before the monk with joined hands and asked him how the evil might be removed from his daughter. The monk then said, 'Make a chest of sandal-wood, and having shut up your daughter therein, throw her into the sea.'

The king did as he was told, and having shut her up in the chest threw her into the sea.

The girl's husband, who was out hunting, saw the floating chest, and ordered his men to jump into the sea and fetch it ashore. His men did so. When the chest was brought on land and opened, lo! there was the girl alive. As soon as she recognized her husband, she covered her face. The husband asked her how she had been thus shut up. She replied that her father's chaplain, who had an evil intent with regard to her, had brought her into this predicament. Then the husband asked her to come home with him, but she refused and said that she could not do so unless a monkey brought from the forest was placed in her stead, and the chest left floating.

Her husband did so, and she went to her husband's house.

Meanwhile the monk whose monastery was situated on an island on the sea, saw the chest floating and ordered his disciples to bring it ashore.

They did so and he had it removed to his own room.

Then he ordered his disciples to go on with their usual hymns with great vigor, and added that even if he should call them, they need not attend.

Then at midnight, full of joy, he opened the chest; but to his surprise, he found there a fierce monkey who fell upon him and tore his throat open, so that he fell down dead.

Next morning, when the disciples saw that their master did not come out though it was late in the day, they peeped through a hole in the door, and saw that he lay dead. They opened the door, and out ran the monkey.

Then they understood that the monkey must have killed their preceptor.

MORAL.—As a man sows, so does he reap. Beauty sits quiet at home, while the monk is killed by the monkey.

LABĀNKĪ OF THE PUNJAB.

The Labhānī (locally called Labānī or Labān^{ki}) of the Punjab is also based on Rājasthānī. But its original is rather the Bāgrī of north-west Rajputana, than the half Mārwarī half Gujarātī which we have observed in the Central Provinces. It will be remembered that one of the typical peculiarities of Bāgrī is that the initial k of the genitive postposition is changed to g, so that kō becomes gō. In Punjab Labānī this principle is carried still further. The dative postposition kū becomes gū; the ablative postposition tī becomes dī; the past tense of the verb substantive tō, was, becomes dō, and similarly the illative conjunction tō, then, becomes dō. We even find the word paharāo, clothe, changed to bharāo.

The declension of nouns follows the usual north-western Rājasthānī forms. The nominative of strong masculine a-bases ends in ō, not ā, and its oblique form and plural ends in ā, not ē. Thus, ghōrō, a horse, oblique form ghōrā. There is the usual locative in ē, as in ghōrē, on a horse. The agent case, however, takes the postposition nē, and is regularly employed before the past tenses of transitive verbs.

The usual postpositions are—

Dative-accusative khō, gū, gē (locative of the genitive), kō (borrowed from Hindōstānī), nē (a Gujarātī form), nū (Panjābī).

Ablative, dī, san, kōlō (from-near). Genitive, gō (Bāgrī), rō (Mārwarī), kā (Hindōstānī). Locative, mā.

Sometimes rē is used as a sign of the agent case as in un-rē dīnō, he gave; jīn-rē, by whom. The genitive postpositions end in ē, when agreeing with a noun in the locative, as in in-rē wāstē, for this. In one case we have nē, the locative of the Gujarātī genitive suffix nō, viz., in chillar-nē karē, with the husks. Rā is used as the sign of the accusative in jē-rā sūr khāvē-dā, what the swine were eating.

The vocative particle is rē when addressing men, and rī, when addressing women.

The oblique plural sometimes ends in an, as in Rājasthānī. Thus, ākhan-mā, in eyes; gōdan-mā, on the feet.

As a general rule Hindōstānī and Panjābī forms are also freely used, so that, though based on Rājasthānī, the language is essentially mixed in character.

The numerals are as in Hindōstānī. It will be noticed that the form dī for 'two,' which we met in the Central Provinces, is not found in the Labānī of the Punjab.

The first two personal pronouns are as follows. The agent case is the same as the nominative:—

Maī, I, by me; mhārō, my; mū-khō, to me; ham, we, by us; hamārō, our.

Tū or thū, thou, by thee; thārō, thy; tam (a regular Rājasthānī and Gujarātī form), you, by you; thuārō, your.

In both pronouns Hindōstānī forms are also freely employed.

'He,' 'that' is ō or woh, oblique singular ū, nom. pl. vē or veh; oblique plural ū or un. We have also forms like unhā ghar-mā, in that house; unā mulk-mā, in that country.

Yeh or yoh, is 'this'; ī-gē (accusative), it; ī-gō, of this one; inhā ghōrā-gī umar, the age of this horse.

Other pronominal forms are jō, who; jē-rā (acc.), what; kaun, kēh^rō, who? kū-gō, whose? kā, kā-ē, what? kītⁿā-k (with Rājasthānī pleonastic k), how many?

Ghar-gō, of the house, is regularly used to mean 'one's own,' like the Hindōstānī ap'nā.

The verb substantive is thus declined in the present :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	ō, ā, āũ	ā.
2.	ē, ī	ā, ō.
3.	ē	ā, ē.

The following forms are also used :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	haigō, chhaigō	haigā, chhaigā.
2.	haigō, chhaigō	haigā, chhaigā.
3.	haigō, chhaigō	haigā, chhaigā.

Note that, as in Northern Gujarātī, the second person singular is the same as the first person singular. Note, also, that all persons of the plural end in ā.

Finally, hai or chhai can be used for any person of the present tense. This also occurs in Gujarātī dialects.

The past tense is dō, hēgō-dō, or chhēgō-dō. The masculine plural is dā, hēgā-dā, or chhēgā-dā.

The simple present tense of the finite verb takes the following forms. Thus, 'I strike,' etc. :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mārū	mārā.
2.	mārū	mārē.
3.	mārē	mārē.

The Present Definite is formed as in Rājasthānī and Gujarātī, by conjugating the verb substantive with the simple present, and not with the present participle. Thus, maĩ mārū-āũ, I am striking. Similarly we have an Imperfect khāvē-dā, they were eating.

The Future has s for its characteristic letter as in eastern Rājasthānī and Gujarātī. It is conjugated as follows. 'I shall strike, etc.' :—

	Sing.	Plur.
1.	mārūs.	mār*sē.
2.	mārās.	mār*sō.
3.	mār*si.	mār*san, mār*sē.

There is a future passive participle in bō, which can also be used for the future, as in kar^abō, it is to be done, i.e., (we) shall do.

The Imperative is as usual. Thus, dē-thāō, give away. Special forms are li-as, bring, with the Rājasthānī pleonastic s; khājē, eat; hōjē, become; chāl^ajē, go.

It seems that the syllable gō (feminine gī) may be added to all these forms without affecting the sense. Thus, āvē-gō, it may come; chāhī-gō, it is proper; chāl^ajē-gī, go ye women.

The past participle ends in iō. Thus, māriō, struck. From this past tenses are formed exactly as in Hindōstānī. Thus, ō-nē māriō, he struck; ō giō, he went. The Perfect sometimes combines the past participle with the verb substantive into one word. Thus, āyā, for āiō-ā, I have come.

Kar^anō, to do, makes its past participle kiō or kīnō. Kiō is also used to mean 'said,' as in Gujarātī.

The present participle is mār^atō, striking; the infinitive, mār^anō, to strike; and the conjunctive participle, mār, mār-gē, or mār-kē, having struck.

In khawāriō, caused to feed, we have a causal verb formed by suffixing ār, as in Rājasthānī.

The first two specimens of Labānī of the Punjab come from Lahore. They are a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son and a folk-song.

- (7) 'And we shall play the sports of the month of Sāwan.'

Enter a troop of Mughul pedlars.

- (8) 'Run away, girls, here is a troop of Mughuls.'
- (9) (The Mughuls.) 'Do not run away, girls. We are Labānās.'
- (10) 'If you were Labānās, you would carry sticks on your shoulders.'
- (11) 'If you were Labānās, your waistbands would be loose.'
- (12) 'If you were Labānās, you would have pinḍī-turbans on your heads.'
- (13) 'O girls, in what village do you live?'
- (14) 'We girls live in a Gujar village.'
- (15) 'Who wants to buy red cloth, and who wants to buy chintz? The red cloth makes a noise.'¹
- (16) 'The father-in-law buys red cloth, and the daughter-in-law buys chintz. The red cloth makes a noise.'
- (17) 'How much red cloth was purchased, and how much chintz? The red cloth makes a noise.'
- (18) 'Eight yards of red cloth were purchased, and ten yards of chintz. The red cloth makes a noise.'

LABĀNĪ OF KANGRA.

The Labānī of Kangra does not differ from that of Lahore. There are only a few local peculiarities. As a specimen, I give an interesting folk-tale.

We may note the following few divergencies from what we have seen in Lahore.

The locative of the genitive as well as the sign of the conjunctive participle is sometimes written gai instead of gē. For the dative we have gū (not gū) and khū (not khō). The sign of the locative is maĩ.

The datives of the first two personal pronouns are ma-khū, to me; ta-khū, to thee. Woh, that, and yoh, this, have feminine forms, wah and yah, in the nominative singular. Thus, wah ant dēsi, she will give the explanation; wah jagah disī, that place (fem.) appeared; yah (bāt, understood) mushkal chhai, this thing is difficult. In Rājasthānī these pronouns have also such feminine forms.

The same two pronouns have unē and inē for their oblique forms singular. Thus, unē janānā-nē, by that woman; inē bāt-gū, to this thing.

'What?' is kah, and 'anything' kaū.

Among verbal forms note thō as well as dō for 'was'; karas, I shall do; dēs, I will give; dēsī, she will give. The past participle is spelt with y, not i. Thus, dēkhyō, seen.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A man was once coming home from service, and as he was benighted on the way, stopped for the night in a wayside house. At midnight he saw a woman kill her son at the instigation of her lover. He stayed where he was till morning, and then asked her for an explanation of her conduct. 'Is not,' said he, 'thine own son dear to thee?' She replied, 'If thou want an explanation, thou must go to my sister. I will give thee a letter to her, and she will give thee the explanation.'

So the man took the letter to the woman's sister, and when the latter had read it, she said, 'Come to me on the first Sunday of next month with a first-born goat, and I will give you the explanation.' So on the first Sunday of the next month the man brought her the goat. She had prepared a sacrificial platform on which she made the goat to stand, and she put a vermilion mark on its forehead. Then she gave a sword into the man's hand and said, 'When I give thee the sign kill the goat.' Then she recited some incantations and gave the sign. The man killed the goat, and, lo and behold, he immediately found himself in the middle of a forest, with not a soul near him. He wandered about till he came to a round-looking house without a door. He walked round it, and somehow or other managed to climb up the wall and to get down inside. There he found a bedstead and bedding, but nobody was there, so he quietly lay down on the bed and went to sleep.

Now the owners of this house were four fairies. When they came home they were quite frightened to see a strange man, and they said among themselves, 'God has sent us a man in the middle of this forest. Let us not say anything to him.' So they said nothing to him, and when he awoke they put nice food before him, and did all they could for his comfort. In this way they tended him for some ten or fifteen days, and they all became quite fond of him and he of them.

One day the man said to them, 'When you go out for a stroll, I am always afraid of being alone.' So they gave him the keys of the house, and told him that he might amuse himself by looking into all the rooms, except one, and into that room he was not to go. After a month had passed they got on so well together that they took him for their husband, and he took them for his wives.

One day it came into the man's head that he would look through the rooms of the house, and he opened the door of the room which the fairies had told him not to enter. In the room he saw an ass. It had a saddle on its back, and jewelled trappings. The ass said to him, 'Mount my back, and I will take thee for a ride for a great distance in a moment of time, and then I will bring thee safely back here.' So the man got on its back, and the ass flew up to heaven, and when it came down again, it alighted in a forest. It began to walk about on a dunghill and to eat the dirt. The man thought that the ass was hungry, and got off to give it something to eat and drink. No sooner had he dismounted than he fell into a deep sleep. When he awoke and opened his eyes, the ass was no longer there, and he found himself in the very place where he had killed the goat. He ran up to the woman, and asked her to send him back again to his home with the fairies. She replied, 'This is a difficult thing to do. If you will bring me your first-born son, I will be able to send you there.' As soon as she had finished, he went and fetched his eldest son, and the woman made the boy stand on the platform on which the goat had previously stood. She put a sword into the man's hand and began to recite her incantations. When the time came for her to make the sign to strike the mortal blow, she snatched the sword from his hand, and said, 'Thou brute, dost thou not yet understand why my sister killed her child to please her lover?'

Except those received from the district of Muzaffargarh, all the remaining Labānī specimens received from the Punjab are in the same language as that of those just given. Further examples are therefore not necessary.

The specimens received from Muzaffargarh are quite different. This district is separated from Bikaner by the north of the State of Bahawalpur, and the Muzaffargarh Labānī specimens are in ordinary Bikanēri. A few lines from the commencement of a folk-tale which in itself is not of great interest, and is moreover not very decent, will show this.

Ēk	saudāgar	saudāg*ri-nē	giō.	Saudāgar-zādī	ēk*lī	rahī.
A	merchant	trade-for	went.	The-merchant's-wife	alone	remained.
Pādshāhī-rō	wazīr	ēk	buḍḍhī-nē	kahē	lāgō,	'saudāgar-zādī
dhurī	jāō,	mārē-lā-rē	majlas	karā.'
near	go,	me-with	intimacy	make.'

It is unnecessary to give more. It will be seen that the above is ordinary Bikanēri. I may mention, however, that in this dialect the word for 'two' is ḍī, as in the Labhānī of the Central Provinces.

LABĀNĪ OF GUJARAT.

As an example of the Labhānī (locally called 'Labānī') of Gujarat, I give an extract from a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son received from the district of the Panch Mahals. It will be seen that it follows the Panjābī Labānī in changing an initial k to g. Thus, kō, of, becomes gō, and kī, that, becomes gī. I have not found any instances of the change of t to d, which also occurs in the Panjab. As will be seen from the specimen, the dialect is in other respects a mixture of Gujarātī and Mālvi.

Amongst special peculiarities, we may notice the change of i to a in words like dan for din, a day, and nakaḷyo for nikaḷyō, he went out. So, ē becomes a in phar^abō for phēr^abō, to journey. U becomes a in malak for mulk, a country; adāū for udāū, prodigal, and gamāyō for gumāyō, wasted. All these also occur in colloquial Gujarātī.

The usual postposition of the agent case is nē, but we have also gē in ū-gē gamāyō, he wasted. The demonstrative pronoun is ū, tī, or vī.

BAHRŪPIĀ.

The Bahrūpiās or Mahtams are a tribe who have settled in the Punjab districts of Gujrat and Sialkot. A few, also, are found in the State of Kapurthala. They have a dialect of their own, of which the following speakers have been returned for this Survey :—

Sialkot	1,500
Gujrat	1,302
TOTAL	2,872

Their own tradition is that they came from Rajputana with Rājā Mān Singh on the occasion of his expedition to Kabul (A.D. 1587), and that some of them settled in the neighbourhood of their present seat on his return from that country.

There is a Bahrūp sub-tribe of the Labānās of the Punjab, and Sir Denzil Ibbetson¹ has pointed out that the Labānās and Mahtams closely resemble each other.

Their language is nearly the same as that of the Labhānīs of Berar, i.e., it is based on the dialects spoken in Northern Gujerat (of Bombay) and in South-Western Rajputana. It hence differs somewhat from the Labānī of the Punjab, which, as we have seen, is more nearly connected with Bāgrī.

As specimens of this dialect, I give a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and an account of the origin of the tribe as narrated by a Bahrūpiā. Both come from Sialkot. It will be seen that the language differs but slightly from Berar Labhānī, except that it is freely mixed with Panjābī. The specimens received from Gujrat are similar, but have a stronger admixture of that language. No specimens have been received from Kapurthala.

The following are the principal characteristics by which we can compare the language of the specimens with the Labhānī of Berar.

There is a tendency to metathesis, or the interchange of consonants in the same word. Thus, wahēlī for havēlī, a mansion.

There is the usual oblique form in ē for nouns ending in consonants. Thus the dative of Lāhōr, Lahore, is Lāhōrē-nē; so ghorē-ṭhā, from the house. Strong masculine nouns with ā bases end, as usual, in ō, with an oblique form in ā. Thus, ghōrō, a horse, oblique singular ghōrā. The postposition of the genitive is rō (with the usual changes), and that of the dative, rē, rā, or nē. The case of the agent may take nē, but, as often as not, drops it.

Note the form dī, not dō, for 'two.' This is characteristic of Labhānī.

As for the pronouns, there are a few peculiar forms. In the first two personal pronouns, maī is 'I' and 'by me,' and taī or tū is 'thou' and 'by thee.' Irregular is mimī for maī vī, even I. The genitives are properly mhārō and thārō (as in Berar), but they are often written māhrō or māhar and tāhrō or tāhar, respectively. The pronoun of the third person is ū, its oblique form, and also its agent case, is oh, ū, or uhō. 'This' is ai. Jaī, by whom.

The present tense of the verb substantive is as usual in Labhānī. Thus:—

	Singular.	Plural.
1	chhē or chhē.	chhē or chhē.
2	chhē.	chhē or chhē.

Note that chhē can be used for any person and in both numbers. It is also used for the past tense, as in the first sentence of the Parable and in many other passages in the specimens. The Gujarātī forms hatō and tō are also freely used.

The conjugation of the finite verb is the same as that of Berar Labhānī. We may note the Gujarātī form gēlō as well as giyō, for 'he went.'

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

When Rājā Mān Singh¹ came here, we were his servants. The Rājā conquered Kabul, and then his ministers and courtiers advised him to return towards Lahore. When he halted in the Punjab District of Gujrat, four of our clans, Pawār, Raṭhaur, ¹ Rājā of Āmbēr (Jaipur). He was Akbar's famous lieutenant.

Chōhān, and Tūr, were in attendance on him. Three of these have survived, but the fourth, the Tūr, became Muhammadans for the sake of a Gūjar woman. Those of our brethren who went home with the Rājā went home; but we stopped at Rāmnagar where we built houses and dwellings. Thence we migrated to Sōdhrā, and settled there. Then we again moved from Sōdhrā and founded our present villages.
